Tax Reform Ready for Final Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate cleared away the last of scores of amendments Wednesday night and readied its bulky tax reform bill for a final vote sometime Thursday.

The bill that raises Social Security benefits and slashes income taxes nearly 20 per cent for those in the middle brackets was expected to pass easily although a motion to send it back to committee was expected.

A final round of after-the-fact debate is likely on the tax-cutting amendments that ballooned expected deficit to more than $5 billion and prompted repeated threats of a presidential veto.

The measure as approved by the Senate Commerce Committee would have granted $9 billion in relief while bringing in $6.7 billion in new revenue.

As the Senate completed work on amendments new revenue had been slashed to $6 billion and tax relief increased to more than $11 billion.

Major features of the bill are an increase in the personal income tax exemption from $600 to $800 and a 15 per cent across-the-board hike in Social Security benefits that includes doubling of the minimum payments.

The measure also extends the income surtax for another six months at a reduced 5 per cent rate and the auto and telephone excise for a full year.

If approved Thursday, the bill is expected to go immediately to a joint House-Senate conference committee where leaders say there is little doubt much of what the Senate loaded on will be stripped away.

House and Senate leaders also said they expected a measure acceptable to President Nixon to be ready to go to the White House before Christmas.

In one of its final steps, the Senate overwhelmingly turned down an amendment to put off until the federal budget is balanced the major tax cuts written into the bill during the long debate.

Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., proposed that step, but it was tabled, and thus killed, on a 56 to 28 roll call vote.

Curtis said his amendment would have postponed $5 billion worth of tax cuts, including the boost in personal income tax exemptions which led President Nixon to threaten a veto of the whole measure.

The Curtis measure also would have affected a provision offering tax credits for tuition payments, an increase in medical deductions for some taxpayers, and provisions easing on some businesses the impact of the repeal of the investment tax credit.

"I'm opposed to reducing taxes if we have to borrow the money," Curtis said. He proposed that the whole package of tax cuts be put off until the Treasury certifies that the budget will show a surplus.

"That wouldn't be next year, it wouldn't be any time soon," said Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Finance Committee.

Long said if the Senate followed the Curtis plan, it might as well start work on the bill all over again. "Here are all the major issues we've been fighting and debating and voting on for the past three weeks," he said.

"I know we can't make the House agree to all these amendments anyway," Long conceded.

The Senate spent more than 13 hours in session to get the bill to the verge of passage. Two members, Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., and Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., showed up for late roll call votes in tuxedos, anxious to get away for social engagements.

2 Women, Infant Killed in Crash

Two former area women and a 20 month old child were killed near Forrest, Miss., Wednesday morning while enroute to Spring City for the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Sharon Griffin, 24, her infant son Michael and Justina Wadsworth, 25, driver of the car, were dead on arrival at Forrest Community Hospital after their car collided with a pickup truck.

Mississippi State Police said the car was travelling east on U.S. Route 80 four miles outside Forrest when Miss Wadsworth attempted to pass, losing control of her vehicle on the wet pavement and colliding with the oncoming truck.

All three occupants of the car suffered fractured skulls and spinal injuries, police said. The driver of the truck was seriously injured.

SPEND HOLIDAYS

Mrs. Griffin, daughter of Dorothy (Oehlert) Hallman and Robert W. Hallman Jr., assistant principal of Spring Ford Junior High School, was returning to her parents' home, 503 New St., Spring City, with her son to spend the holidays with her parents, two brothers and a sister.

Her husband Myron planned to arrive in Spring City Dec. 20.

The couple lived in El Paso, Texas, where Griffin is employed in his father's artifical limb and brace shop.

Mrs. Griffin was born in

SHARON GRIFFIN

Phoenixville and graduated from Spring-Ford High School in 1964. She entered an on-the-job training program in the laboratory of Phoenixville Hospital where she worked three years.

She was married in 1967. Mrs. Griffin and her husband lived in Spring City for a short time before moving to El Paso, where they lived for the past year and a half.

Their son Michael was born in Phoenixville Hospital April 5, 1968.

Mrs. Griffin last visited her family in Feburary, when she returned home to attend her grandfather's funeral.

Judge Drops Kopechne Autopsy

WILKES-BARRE, PA. —(AP) — A Pennsylvania judge refused today to order the body of Mary Jo Kopechne exhumed for an autopsy.

It was a victory for the parents of the 28-year-old secretary who was killed last summer in Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's car.

Common Pleas Judge Bernard C. Brominski, after seven weeks of consideration, denied the petition of a Massachusetts district attorney who plans an inquest.

FACTS INSUFFICIENT

Brominski said the facts presented by District Attorney Edmund Dinis of New Bedford, Mass., "are insufficient to support a finding of the cause of death" other than drowning.

In his 14-page opinion, the judge said that after two days of testimony it was difficult for him to conclude that Miss Kopechne's grave should be disturbed.

He said that if Dinis had any evidence that might prove the need for an autopsy "it has not been presented here."

The Massachusetts inquest has been delayed pending this ruling.

Brominski said he took into consideration the vigorous objection by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kopechne, Berkeley Heights, N.J.

"While their disapproval is not an absolute bar to an exhumation and autopsy," Brominski said, "in view of the facts presented to this court their objections are well taken."

Joseph F. Flanagan, the Kopechne attorney said "the family's position has been fully vindicated and their feeling that there should be no autopsy was justified."

Miss Koepchne died on the night of July 18, when Kennedy's car plunged off a narrow bridge and into a pond on Chappaquiddick Island, adjoining Martha's Vineyard off the coast of Massachusetts.

An assistant medical examiner who made only an external examination ruled then that Miss Koepchne had drowned. Three days after the accident she was buried in Larksville, not far from where she was born in northeastern Pennsylvania's hard coal region.

A petition for exhumation and autopsy was filed on Aug. 14 by Dinis, who said he wouldn't appeal if he lost and would go ahead with an inquest at Edgartown, Mass.

Mafia Runs States IRS Mitchell Says

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Organized crime has gained control of a great portion of the Internal Revenue Service in one state, U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell said Wednesday. He predicted massive indictments within 10 days would crush "the largest gambling syndicate ever broken up in this country."

Mitchell refused to identify the state involved, but a Justice Department aide told a reporter it was New Jersey.

The attorney general said there would be "massive indictments of public officials at the local level."

"Organized crime can only exist where it is protected by government at some level," Mitchell told a convention of the Investment Bankers Association of America. "In the state involved, a great portion of the IRS is controlled by organized (crime) syndicates."

Since last June, two former supervisors in the audit division of the IRS in Newark have been indicted on bribery charges.

"The investigations were conducted by the Justice Department, FBI, IRS, Labor Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC)," Mitchell told the bankers.

Mitchell said the probe has been aimed at Mafia families in the area.

"If citizens feel the crime rate is high, they're right," Mitchell said. "The cutoff of the narcotics supply into the United States is one of two major steps needed to halt the spiraling crime rate. The other is to upgrade our correctional institutions and bring them up to the 20th Century."

Mitchell said the number of criminal acts where narcotics are involved is up 733 per cent since 1960.

The attorney general spoke shortly after Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio testified in Newark that he knows reputed Cosa Nostra figure Anthony "Tony Boy" Boiardo.

Jersey Government, Crime Links Probed

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Reports of links between organized crime and government in New Jersey spread Wednesday, as federal authorities took over a county probe of alleged corruption in Newark and a Justice Department source said the crime syndicate had worked its way into the state's Internal Revenue Service.

There were indications the Newark mayor may have to answer a federal grand jury's questions in the investigation of alleged illegalities.

In Boca Raton, Fla., meanwhile, U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell said organized crime had gained control of a large portion of the IRS in one state. He refused to identify the state, but an aide said it was New Jersey.

Mitchell predicted massive indictments in 10 days which he said would crush "the largest gambling syndicate ever broken up in this country." He said there would be "massive indictments of public officials at the local level."

GOVERNMENT PROTECTION

Mitchell added, "Organized crime can only exist where it is protected by government at some level."

In Newark, attention centered on the grand jury probe.

U.S. Attorney Frederick B. Lacey vowed to "wage war" on organized crime with a joint force including two members of the Essex County prosecutor's staff. Material from a 100-day county grand jury investigation was turned over to the federal panel, which has called Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio among its witnesses.

Addonizio, who refused Tuesday to answer 24 questions before the grand jury, said in court Wednesday that he knew Anthony "Tony Boy" Boiardo, a reputed Cosa Nostra figure.

Norco Uniform Change Shocks Canada Dry Man

A top official of the Canada Dry corporation expressed shock Tuesday when he learned that the North Coventry Township supervisors voted to garb their policemen in traditional police uniforms doing away with the "Canadian Mountie" uniform.

Allen Wals, vice president of Canda Dry, said, "It's a shame. The uniforms have a proud tradition and are beautiful."

Wals, of New York, became interested in the controversy because Canada Dry has its own "Mountie." The Canada Dry Mountie is used in television commercials and, in one promotion, gave away money for persons recognizing him, at times. Norco police have been mistaken for the Canada Dry Mountie as well as real Mounties.

Wals has assured the Royal Canadian Mounted Police that the commercial meant no disrespect because the Mountie uniforms are steeped in tradition and are beautiful.

Pentagon Reveals Irregularities In Air Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon disclosed Wednesday that the Air Force, like the Army, has uncovered alleged irregularities, including money kickbacks, in the operation of some officer and noncommissioned officer clubs, specifically in Thailand.

Secretary of the Air Force Robert C. Seamans Jr. reported the alleged illicit activities have been revealed in an investigation extending back about 18 months.

Seamans pledged in a memorandum to Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird that the Air Force will "pursue this matter vigorously."

"You may be certain that there will be no 'cover-up' of any irregularities which are uncovered as a result of the Air Force investigation," Seamans said.

"Although the investigation has not yet been completed, it is quite apparent to me that we have a problem," the Air Force chief stated.

Seamans did not go into detail about the illicit activities in his memorandum but said he has advised appropriate congressional committees of "the status of the case, of the actions which the Air Force has taken" and has provided them pertinent information.

Shakeup Announced For FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Welfare Robert H. Finch announced Wednesday a shakeup of the trouble-ridden Food and Drug Administration, including the ouster of its commissioner and two of its key associates.

The FDA will undergo a total reorganization by Feb. 1, 1970 and regain a higher rung on the government ladder that it lost 18 months ago.

Finch announced that Dr. Herbert L. Ley Jr., will be replaced as the agency's commissioner Feb. 1 by Dr. Charles C. Edwards, a one-time surgeon who is now a management expert and aide to Dr. Roger O. Egeberg, assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs.

Ley, who was informed of the change Tuesday, has been offered a new post as an assistant to Egeberg. Ley is reported by close associates to be upset by what he considers his firing. They say he has not decided whether to take the new job.

NEW JOBS

Leaving the FDA along with Ley will be Winton B. Rankin, deputy commissioner, and J. Kenneth Kirk, associate commissioner for compliance. The two career officials will be offered new jobs within the department, officials said.

The shakeup followed months of criticism directed at the agency by Congress, consumer advocates and the food and drug industries.

Undersecretary of Welfare John Veneman emphasized at a news conference that the purpose of Ley's replacement is to bring "more management expertise" into the FDA.

The Weather

Rain ending early today, becoming partly sunny in the afternoon. It will be partly cloudy and mild tonight and Friday.

Boyle Claims Win; Foe Cries Fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Mine Workers President W. A. "Tony" Boyle claimed an overwhelming re-election victory Wednesday, while his opponent charged massive vote-stealing.

"He's happy at the outcome," said a spokesman for the 65-year-old Boyle.

His opponent, 59-year-old union official Joseph A. Yablonski, said massive violations of federal labor law marked Tuesday's election and hinted he will challenge the result in court and ask for a Labor Department investigation.

Boyle went about his $50,000-a-year job as president of the nearly 200,000-member union after attributing his re-election to coal miners' loyalty to the late John L. Lewis.

The Boyle-Yablonski contest was the biggest internal union fight since 1926, when Lewis defeated an opponent during his 40-year reign over the union.

Boyle was a protege of Lewis, who continued to dominate the union even after his retirement in 1960 until his death last June at the age of 89.

Yablonski, $25,000-a-year member of the union's executive board for the past 27 years, refused to accept the headquarters vote count giving Boyle a victory of 74,335 to 40,847.

West Pottsgrove Adopts Budget

By CHARLES H. PITCHFORD
Mercury Staff Writer

The West Pottsgrove Township Board of Commissioners adopted its operating budget for the 1970 year at the monthly meeting in the West End Firehall Wednesday night.

The new budget of $92,690 is a slight increase over the current operating figure.

The operation and maintenance of the township highways was allotted $55,385 and $23,062 was budgeted for police and fire protection.

Despite the slight increase in the new budget, the millage for the township will remain the same. The current rate is 14 mills.

New increases in the budget approved by the board members were the salaries for the township secretary and road crews. The new secretary will now receive $2,000 per year, an increase of $200 a year. The other increase is in the pay rate of the township roadmaster, who will receive three dollars an hour, and his assistant, who will receive $2½ an hour.

STEP CLOSER

The continuing controversy over the firing of Township Police Chief Arthur Mays came a step closer to reaching a solution at Wednesday's meeting.

A hearing for Mays, scheduled for last Tuesday, was postponed until Friday, over an argument as to the site of the hearing.

Rain and Wind Punish Area on Miserable Day

A bone-chilling rain driven by a 35-mile-per-hour wind battered and drenched the area Wednesday during the month's heaviest downpour.

Shortly after midnight Wednesday, nearly two inches of rain had soaked the area and caused small creeks and streams almost to exceed their banks.

The Manatawny Creek, which overflowed its banks during last July's flood that washed out roads and damaged property, also raised several inches during the rainfall Wednesday.

The downpour, which began shortly before noon, was preceded by a light mist during most of the morning hours.

The chilly rain forced pupils to return to classes in yellow slickers and raincoats for the afternoon school sessions.

School crossing guards had to brave the elements to usher their charges to safety, and motorists had to use extra caution in the heavy rains as they approached schools.

Throughout the day and nighttime hours, hazardous driving conditions existed as the gusty winds flung the rain against windshields.

Despite the unpleasant shopping conditions, many local and area residents refused to have their Yuletide spirit chilled. Dressed in proper rain wear, they continued with purchases of holiday gifts.

The rain proved a boom to area farmers and landscapers.

The State Crop Reporting Service said Wednesday that the soil was beginning to show evidence of dryness in many sections because of the lack of rain within the past month.

Lloyd Hughes, president of Fisher-Hughes Inc., landscapers, Douglassville, said "it's good we're having this soaking rain before the ground freezes. The water will help to keep the plants moist throughout the winter."

Hughes, also president of Pine Forge Ski area, explained, "even though the rain was good for the plants, it was detrimental to the ski slope. All of the snow we made for the past three days has been washed away."

700 British Troops Leaving Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — About 700 British troops will be pulled out of Northern Ireland next week, the army announced Wednesday night, and they will not be replaced.

"The Ulster garrison can be reinforced at any time," said a spokesman at the army headquarters in Belfast.

The withdrawal of about 700 men of the 1st Battalion of the Royal Green Jackets will leave about 7,000 troops in Ulster, Northern Ireland's official name.

Two weeks ago a battalion of about 500 men of the Royal Hampshire Regiment withdrew.

Special Privileges

Pottstown council took the first concrete step this week to provide special privileges for its employes.

Meter heads will be removed and employes of the borough will get free parking.

This is not to be misconstrued as free parking for borough owned vehicles on borough business.

This is personal parking.

Why borough employes are entitled to free parking and John Citizen isn't is a puzzle. What vested right do borough employes have that others don't?

The borough has been extending "courtesy" parking to official visitors to borough hall. This means that Handcuff Salesman Sam Lockum gets free parking. Why Sam is more important than another salesman who sells to private industry also is puzzling.

Several years ago, council removed free parking areas for doctors. The reason behind this also was baffling If anyone needs a clear parking zone it is the doctor. His car should be close at hand for emergency.

What emergency could confront a clerk in borough hall that would command free parking?

By condoning the practice of special privileges for borough employes, council is discriminating against all downtown workers.

Meters were intended to insure a free flow of traffic. But looking at the local parking system, meters are there to make money for the borough. Downtown workers must have a place to park.

It is no more inconvenient for borough employes to put nickels in a meter than it is for a clerk.

If council feels so compelled to provide parking as a fringe benefit for borough employes why doesn't it raise each employes salary $100 per year and let the $100 be spent on meters.

Workers downtown get discouraged when they see special favoritism given to a choice few.

No one disputes that the fire chief, police chief, borough manager, the mayor and other officials should have areas to park free for cars used on borough business. But this "free" cover should not extend to all employes who own cars.

And, does this special privilege extend to non-working hours? Can John Doe park at a borough hall location free on Friday nights and Saturday?

Do policemen with the Fraternal Order of Police emblems get free parking throughout the town?

Before council goes off in a generous gesture to provide free parking, it should take a look at its overall parking policies.

Malthus Revisited

India, with its present population of 500 million, frequently is singled out as the horrible example of over-population. But young Americans may live to see the day the United States reaches the 500 million level, if population growth continues at the current pace.

In the 15 years ending in 1975 the world will add about one billion people to the three billion inhabitants already here. It took from the beginning of man to the year 1850 to accumulate the first billion. One of every 22 persons born since the Stone Age is living today.

All of which supports the theory propounded by T. R. Malthus more than a century and a half ago that man tends to increase in a geometric ratio while his means of subsistence increases only arithmetically. It was the gloomy Malthusian conclusion that nothing could stop this arrangement except starvation, war or some other major calamity.

Man in the twentieth century has done nothing to disprove the Malthus concept, but mankind's fate is not irrevocably sealed in an overpopulation disaster. Some nations will act before it is too late.

Poachers are Target

If it weren't for human ego, conservationists would have a much easier time trying to save some of the most fascinating species of wildlife from extinction. Reminiscent of another generation, when the battle for survival of the egret and heron centered on plumage for ladies' hats, is the current struggle to preserve what remains of such creatures as the ocelot, jaguar, leopard and alligator.

These creat res and others provide a lucrative business for poachers who find a ready market for their skins and hides. Fashion houses which turn them into expensive fur coats, shoes and handbags aren't particular about where their raw materials come from.

It is reassuring that Congress has finished work on legislation making it a federal crime to engage in interstate commerce in hides taken in violation of any federal, state or foreign law.

Implementing such a law could be a step toward eliminating the threatened animal's greatest enemy. A larger step would be for the public to refuse to buy products made from skins and pelts which could not be proven to have come from legitimate sources.

The Worry Clinic

Strategy Boosts Attendance

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Lloyd Ellis belongs to a Lions Club.

And he was winner of the jackpot when I recently addressed his organization.

"Dr. Crane," its chairman informed me, "we have a custom of collecting a dime from each member at our meetings.

"Then we have a drawing to see who is the lucky winner of this pot.

"If a name is picked of a member who is present, then we award the money from the jackpot to his wife.

"We mail it to her with a little note saying that because her husband was present at our Lions Club meeting and had his name selected by chance, she is the recipient of the weekly jackpot.

"But if a member is not present when his name is drawn, we also send a little note to his wife, telling her that she would have been the recipient of $5 (or whatever the jackpot totals that week), except that her husband was not present.

PRODS WIVES

"Dr. Crane, this prods the wives into making sure their husbands show up for all meetings. Not bad?"

Yes, that is excellent strategy.

Instead of grumbling because her husband leaves home for the Lions Club dinner (or luncheon), the wives are more likely to urge him to attend.

For it may mean money in their pocket.

If a club member is not present the day his name is drawn, then the money accumulates for the next week.

"Dr. Crane," the chairman added, "we'll ask you to do the drawing today."

So I reached into the box that held little plastic capsules, each of which contained a slip of paper with a Lions Club member's name thereon.

And the capsule I pulled out contained the name of Lloyd Ellis, so his wife, Margaret, got the jackpot.

Throughout my many years of lecturing I often was invited to address the various service men's clubs.

And they represent a unique innovation in social service, starting with Rotary (1905), Boy Scouts (1910), Kiwanis (1915), Lions (1917), Optimist (1919), and Civitan (1920).

Never in all the course of human history have as many constructive male organizations been created as in this 16-year span from 1905 to 1920.

CULTURAL SENATE

And the members of these organizations form a "cultural senate" of their community, for they are drawn from all trades and professions, as well as the various churches. In fact, these clubs function much as an interdenominational "home missionary society!"

For they render altruistic aid to crippled kiddies via crutches for polio victims, eye glasses for those who need them, plus summer camps for youngsters.

In the churches, we find women banded together in missionary societies, which have rendered superb aid to deprived people at home and abroad.

But these men's service clubs do the same, except they are an ecumenical or inter-faith group, usually meeting every week for a jolly luncheon.

They stress patriotism and our "free enterprise" system, so they are also an effective bulwark of our great Republic.

May their numbers increase! And this jackpot strategy will help zoom attendance!

Norco's Mountie Uniforms Admired

Disturbed

To the Editor: I was deeply distressed upon reading your paper to learn the North Coventry Supervisors have ordered the police there to stop wearing the Mountie type uniforms.

To my way of thinking the colorful uniforms were some of the few advantages of the township.

They had sparkle, color, and made it easy to distringuish a policeman when you were looking for one in a crowd.

I do hope the supervisors recosider.

Instead of abolishing the few good things in the township they should focus their efforts on bringing more good things here.

But I guess that's too much to expect. We're rural and apparently our supervisors believe they must act with rural type thinking.

Next they'll be ordering all the dogwood trees in the township, especially that beautiful display on the Gruber estate, cut down.

North Coventry DEEPLY DISTRESSED

Hands Off

To the Editor: Some nameless syndicated scribbler using his "medical advice" column for a political soapbox had the temerity to suggest moving our nation's capital city and executive offices to a midwest location in a comparative cultural vacuum.

There couldn't possibly be any valid reasons for making this request. Transmigration today is so simplified. Everyone's a gypsy. Ambassadors, envoys, couriers and consuls think nothing of travelling halfway round the earth to accomplish their aims.

Good old American know-how has given us AT & T, Western Union, Telstar, radar, sonar and Lord knows what else, and these simple tools are freely available to all nations. Napoleon had his semaphore. Logistics would have been a breeze for him, if he had our modern communications.

For Heaven's sake, let's leave the U.N. in New York, and the Capital in D.C., close to our cultural heritage, and let the hobnobbing continue between friends and neighbors the way it has since the memory of men runneth not to the contrary.

Pottstown SANGUINE SUE

Proud

To the Editor: In contradiction to the letter from a Boyertown Student: I attended that game and before the game began there was what you might call a side show going on at the opposite side of the stadium. This so-called band was playing songs such as "The Old Grey Mare" etc. in order to mock us. However at the beginning presentation we gave their band as much attention as they gave ours. At the halftime presentation we were laughing and happy because we were winning that game.

In addition to the part of our "rudeness and inconsideration" I am sure had they just found out that they had won the Ches-Mont League Championship for the first time, they would have been as equally happy. From what I understand our school has to pay for the goalpost and goaline markers which we brought home as remembrances for the game. I would say that we have as much school spirit and possibly even more than some schools around this area. I am most proud to say I am a student of Spring-Ford.

Royersford NINTH GRADER

Stimulating

To The Editor: Your editorials have been stimulating, and I enjoy Readers Say.

Thank you particularly for "Reflections on Murder".

On the whole, I think the seasonal battleground, Christmas, when values fight each other, has helped us surmount our prejudices even for a little while in an effort to think of the other persons charitably.

The season of birth, of new life, humble yet great, with many strikes against it from the start, lets us think of the preciousness of survival.

We can now acknowledge that our own efforts are only fragments of the whole fact of being alive, essential but not the whole of it. I hope there will be a call for cease fire from all sides. I hope there will be massive efforts for survival going forward, to give life a better chance in our world.

I hope we can act, more than write.

Pottstown PHEBE A. RIPKA

Anti Belt

To the Editor: Reading about the five vehicle accident at the King of Prussia exit of the Schuylkill Expressway, in which the gasoline tanks of four vehicles ruptured.

Where were their safety belts?

Then in the next paragraph (P. 4 Mercury today) Of 7,644 automobile parts tested by eight private testing firms, the highest rate of failure 28.6 percent was in fuel tanks and their fittings.

So why the safety belt routine? Who wants to be burned to death?

Birdsboro RD 2 FLORENCE WYDER

Righteously Angry

To the Editor: The generation coming of age in the U. S. today, at least the vast middle-class portion of it, went to Sunday School. The time was the Fifties, the U. S. was not at war, and the children imbibed a lot of philosophy about how it is wrong to kill, about using the Golden Rule as a social principle and about how All Men Are Brothers.

Why are we so amazed when those same children, now full grown, expect the world should actually work that way? Perhaps the Sunday School teachers did their job too well; perhaps they should have talked more about chastity (probably most were afraid to use the word). Perhaps parents should have been as worried about what their children learned in Sunday School as they were about what they learned in public school.

At any rate, the Sunday School teachers did not add enough qualifiers. The bell must have rung too early and the children filed out to junior Church. The teachers apparently forgot to tell them the world doesn't work that way. They forgot to tell them you're supposed to say one thing and feel free to do another. They forgot to tell them not to believe everything they heard from political figures, parents, and school and public authorities.

The poor, stupid children grew up, heard high-sounding words, and expected them to be acted upon (this was especially crucial during the Kennedy years — the children were at the right age, and the words sounded good). Then the words were not fulfilled; indeed, actions often contradicted them. The children became righteously angry, and of course that kind of anger is the most difficult to deal with.

So now we have on our hands a whole generation that is yelling and screaming that a war is immoral, that poor people should be helped (remember the Sunday School's yearly appeal for Christmas gifts to be sent to the Kentucky hills?). "All men are brothers," these kids are saying. Better they'd learned to be chaste.

Pottstown A FELLOW HYPOCRITE

Needs

To The Editor: In December 4 Mercury, Mr. Sotter asked the public for help in meeting the needs of the patients at Pennhurst.

Recently when an appeal was made for help for Mr. Gaffey, many joined in and supported and met that need. Can't we do the same and more for the needy at the institution?

If a station or stations were made available and made known to the public for placing their gifts or donations in town and surrounding areas, I have hope to think we can meet the needs in our local and adjoining communities in so worthy a cause, to help the less fortunate at Pennhurst have a Merry Christmas.

Gilbertsville WILLING AND READY

Opinion

To The Editor: If the thirteen original colonies settled for peace with justice instead of peace with victory, there would be no United States of America today!

A Different Slant

By ROBERT J. BOYLE

I Top Buchwald

I was in a state of flux when I entered the magic room of the big boss.

"My that's a tremendously impressive state of flux which you are in," he said. "Who is your flux dealer?"

"I get my flux from a little old flux maker in Nesquehoning," I replied. "But my mission today does not deal with flux but with my state of flux."

"Well, I personally would prefer you to be frought with anxiety or wrought with frustration than in a state of flux," he said. "But nevertheless what caused your fluxyness?"

"I read in the Wall Street Journal that Art Buchwald gets paid $200,000 a year," I said. "He writes three columns a week. I also write three columns a week and I can't figure out why he should get more than me."

"He writes good," the boss replied.

"Yes, but even if I wrote half as good as he does I should get $100,000," I replied.

"But you don't," he said.

"Well if I just wrote one quarter as good as he does I should get $50,000," I said.

"You don't," the boss replied.

"But even if I wrote only one-tenth as good as he does I should get $20,000," I replied.

"Do you realize you are now being paid more than Buchwald?" he said.

"But I only get $62 a week," I said. "And Buchward gets $200,000."

"Figures are only relevant," he said.

"To what?" I asked.

"It's simple mathematics," he said. "Buchwald may think he is getting $200,000 but he really isn't. You're much better off than he is."

"Pshaw you're joshing me," I replied.

"I not josh," he said. "Take that $200,000. Uncle Sam takes about $140,000 from him. That leaves $60,000."

"Who's Uncle Tom," I asked.

"I didn't say Uncle Tom," he replied, "I said Uncle Sam. The United States tax people. His tax bite is much higher than yours. So let's start with that $60,000 figure. He has to pay sales tax on everything he buys so that probably amounts to $5,000 per year. That leaves him with $55,000."

"That still ain't chicken feed," I said.

"Hold your horses," he replied. "I'm not finished. Buchwald buys clothes and dresses neatly. That's something you don't do. You've been wearing the same suit for the past five years so his clothing expenses are high. I bet he spends $5,000 a year on clothing. That leaves him with a mere $50,000."

"I'll settle for that," I said.

"Again, hold your horses," he said. "Buchwald travels a lot by air. I surmise he spends $5,000 a year on plane travel. That leaves him with $45,000. And, a guy like him is hit for every drive that comes along. I bet he has to contribute at least $5,000 for the Red Cross, Boy Scouts, Barcelonian Goat Dancers and Friends of Fred. So that cuts old Art down to a mere $40,000."

"He is getting lower but still better than me," I said.

"Hold on, be patient," he said. "Art's kids probably go to the best schools. Let's give him three kids in three private schools. Each spends at least $5,000 so we now have cut Art to $25,000. And, I'm sure some of his kids need braces for their teeth. Don't they all. So let's allocate $3,000 for braces for Art's kids. That drops us to $22,000."

"I'm still not sneezing at that figure," I said.

"Now, let's get to the price of living," the boss said. "Art lives near Washington and that means his cost of living is up, up and up. I bet his home alone costs 19 times what yours did. So we'll allow him $10 000 a year for mortgage payments. That cuts him to $12,000."

"Well with his house payments made and his kids in school that $12,000 is a tidy bit. I'll settle for it," I said.

"Boyle, will you be still," the boss said. "Buchwald doesn't drive a car or own a car."

"See he saves there," I said.

"No, he doesn't. That means he has to travel by taxi," the boss said. "He makes a couple of trips a day so his taxi bill cost at least $10 a day or $3,600 per year. Give or take a day. That cuts his $12,000 to $8,400.

"That still isn't bad," I said. "He's far better off than some editors who I know."

"But there are some other factors to consider," he said. "Meals, for one. He doesn't go home for lunch like some editors I know so that means he has to spend at least two bucks every noon or go hungry. And, he doesn't look as if he is hungry. Two bucks a day cuts his pay to $7,800."

"He is getting somewhat lower," I said.

"And, remember because he doesn't go home for lunch he probably has to phone his wife to whisper little sweet things in her ear and that's good for $200 a year He also gets his haircut once a week, not once every two months like an editor who works here. At two bucks a cut that's another $100. So we're down to $7,500."

"He still has that and that's more than I have," I said.

"But he's not home at lunch so he has to pay someone to take out the garbage."

"Well, give him $500 for garbage and the grass and he still has $7,000," I explained.

"Not so fast there," the boss said. "Christmas, huh! He has a big Christmas list. Four hundred and eighty papers use his column and to send fancy cards to all of them costs a bit. That's good for $100. But the big kicker is his incidental expenses. He travels a lot so he spends at least $2,000 a year on travel items. That cuts him to $4,900 and then he has to pay for four meals a day instead of the one."

"Why four?" I asked.

"He's a big eater and four meals a day would knock off another $1,000 so actually he is earning $3,900 a year. Cut this by $1,000 for more incidentals and you get more than he does."

"Gee, boss, I see what you mean," I said. "Thanks for explaining it to me."

"One more thing before you go, Boyle," he said. "If Buchwald only earns $2,900 a year I can't see why you should get $3.124 a year when he's so much better than you. So starting next week I'm cutting you down to $32.50 per week. I'm a fair man."

The Pennsylvania Story

Pressure Groups Undaunted; Hail 1970!

By MASON DENISON

Although Pennsylvania's 1969 legislative session is still in existence (and probably will be until it runs into next year's gathering in January) there are those who already are pointing to the yet-to-convene 1970 gathering!

Among these "pointers" is that indomitable army of pressure groups who flower and flourish each year in an almost continuing drive to induce lawmakers to clear legislation favorable to their cause — financially or otherwise.

The year 1969 has been almost a disastrous year for these people; the Legislature has been too knotted in its own world of woes and problems to pay much heed to the pleas of the speciality people. Lawmakers are still trying to work their way somehow out of the fiscal stalemate that has been their top concern, forcing other issues to the legislative boneyard.

For the pressure groups it has been: scratch the year 1969.

They're pointing now, as they have been somewhat despairingly the past several months, to 1970. From a practical standpoint however, 1970 may be as sad a legislative year as 1969 — for everyone.

The significant point is that when you add up what these specialized groups would like to have taxpayers of the Keystone State fork over for pet projects, it comes to a rather tidy sum — in fact somewhere in the area of about a half-billion dollars.

Obviously the demands of the "pet project" groups cannot be met by any stretch of the imagination without throwing Pennsylvania's already shaky fiscal blueprint into turmoil — but the groups are in there pitching every session, just as they will come the 1970 session.

Virtually nothing seems to deter these pressure groups, of which there are more than a 100 such statewide organizations headquartered here in the Capital City.

They'll turn out mimeographed tomes by the pound extolling thir particular project, detailing why they "must" have additional monies, or rather, why their related state function should have additional taxpayer monies.

These groups run the gamut from advocates of more and more money for highways, for the school system, mental health, political subdivisions, libraries — you name it, there's a pressure group of one kind or another for that particular item.

Ofttimes these groups are made up of "public spirited" citizens, who pay a couple of bucks a year "just to belong." It is these contributions, plus ofttimes healthy contributions from well-healed individual donors obsessed with the "proper" ideal and goal, that make possible the operation of the pressure groups in the first place.

Every such group, without exception, hails its work in one form or another as "in the interests of better government" — which is about as loose a term as you can coin.

Or, if the point is made that there is just so much money available and it must be spread among other functions, each particular group invariably is adamant in inisisting that the others are unimportant — that their particular project is "the" one that should have the money.

This goes on and on and on. Lawmakers are snowed under by letters demanding support of this or that pet project. The Governor's office is pelted. The mimeographed machines work overtime grinding out publicity releases ever pointing to the "crying need" for the particular project.

Well, you add up all these demands by the pressure groups and it comes out to quite a sizable sum, and who pays the bill if these demands are met? Every taxpayer in the Keystone State!

In any event, they'll be swarming over Capitol Hill not unlike a horde of locusts by the time the 1970 Legislature picks up a full head of steam.

Student Who Looks Can Find a College

By HELEN BOTTEL

Dear Helen:

I would like to tell "No Room At The 'In' " that a college education is available to all qualified high school graduates, if they're willing to look. True, some states have a shortage, but there are hundreds of openings in private colleges throughout the country. Many offer scholarships, work grants and loans.

While California and eastern state colleges and universities seem filled to overflowing, many states in between will accept students for a comparatively small out-of-state tuition.

I know. I started college with $36 and ended up with eight years of higher education, six of them outside of my own state. — J. P. R.

Dear Helen:

There is plenty of room for part-time study in most colleges. From part-time, it is easy for proven students to enter the junior or senior level where there is more room because of drop-outs. — ONE WHO COMMUTED AND GRADUATED

Dear Helen:

There is a computerized service for Grade C students, and "No Room" can find out about it by asking his high school counselor. We used it, and our mail was flooded with information about colleges with openings. Some of these were waiting for accreditation; some were expensive, but there is room! And many of these colleges offered federal and state loans, to be paid at low interest after graduation. — C. C.

Dear Helen:

I am 12 and one-half years old and in grade eight. My problem is that my old lady is a pain in the neck. I have a skimpy 75 cents a week allowance that can't even buy two packs of cigarettes.

She is always yelling and complaining and grounding me for dumb things like staying out too late, or not eating my vegetables.

Last night she caught me smoking in my room and blew her head off. I got mad and called her an old fogey and a good for nothing bum, which made her so hot she spanked me with her hairbrush. She never did that before!

I cried and screamed, and today I'm playing hookey to get even. What's wrong with smoking when she does it? Is there a state law against spanking almost-teen-agers? I've got to get even with the old fogey.

Don't give me a smart alec answer. I'm not wasting six cents for a wise crack. — MARLA

Dear Marla:

You just wasted six cents: Girl who calls Mother a bum, deserves the bum's brush!

(And girl who writes phony letters to columnist shouldn't be so obvious about them.) — H.

Dear Helen:

I have blown pot about 10 times. Some friends told me that they heard if you smoked, later in life this might affect your children. I have quit, but I'm worried. Does marijuana do something to the chromosomes, like LSD? — E. R.

Dear E.:

No one knows yet what marijuana does (or does not do), but if you've quit after 10 joints, I'm quite sure you have nothing to worry about. — H.

Patient's Attitude Affects Recovery

By VIRGINIA PAYETTE

Next time your Aunt Tillie tells you she's got the best surgeon in the world, don't snicker. It's this kind of thinking that'll have her back in the sewing circle in record time.

Ever hear of the "acceptance concept"? Well, it's a little like the "Pollyanna" thing. If you convince yourself everything's going to be just dandy after your operation, it is a whole lot more likely to be

But if you grump and grumble and complain it's all a "dirty trick," it's apt to be months before you bounce back.

The man who published this study (in the Journal of Religion and Health) is Dr. Graham Clark, chief of ophthalmology at St. Luke's Hospital Center in New York. Thousands of eye operations (for retinal detachment) convinced him the patient's attitude has almost as much to do with how fast he gets well as the surgeon's skill.

One lady who didn't believe in doctors failed to heal until the doctor convinced her his work was just to put the pieces together. The healing, he said, would come from her faith. And it did.

A high degree of acceptance means you take the shock of surgery in stride. You may look upon it as a tough break, but you refuse to let it get you down.

Surprisingly, the doctor was first able to rule out disease, sex, age, socio-economic status, and even the extent of the operation as factors in slow healing.

Then his team — an office secretary, two nurses and a chaplain — visited with 98 patients (half at St. Luke's and half at Columbia-Presbyterian) before surgery, and graded them according to their "acceptance."

Who got the highest scores? The people who faced up to their eye problem directly, trusted the surgeon completely, were optimistic about the results, able to do things for themselves, and could take the bad with the good.

In the middle were those who accepted their situation with reservations, needed a lot of consolation, and weren't sure their surgeon was invincible, after all.

At the bottom of the scale the patients felt trapped, their backs to the wall, suspicious of their surgeon and convinced they couldn't cope with their problem. Total rejection. After each operation Dr. Clark checked the speed of the patient's healing process against the advance ratings — and it came out on the nose.

Which leads him to think the surgeon can do a lot to improve the acceptance rating by giving the patient all the facts about the operation, what he must do to get well — and why he got sick in the first place.

"All our modern methods may prove ineffective for the primitive tribal man," he says, "if he is convinced he is ill because someone put a curse on him. Even some well-educated people still believe that if they sin, they will be struck blind.

"One of my married patients was having an affair. He thought blindness was to be his punishment. He got well when he decided to end his infidelity."

But there's more to it than that, according to Dr. Clark. The physician also has to "transmit impressive healing forces" with enough charisma to give the patient an "expectant faith" that he will get well.

And he'd better do it before surgery, he says, or else "the patient's prophecies of the healer's inability to heal may well be self-fulfilling."

So, if you're due for an operation, cheer up, keep smiling, trust your surgeon. And — just to be on the safe side — if you're mixed up in any hanky-panky, cut it out.

Play's Leading Man Resembles Joe Alsop

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK — People . . . Places . . .

Any resemblance between the hawkish Washington correspondent in Art Buchwald's upcoming play, "Sheep on the Runway," and Joseph Alsop is purely accidental, Art keeps saying.

The play's mythical correspondent, whose name is Joe Mayflower, fouls things up for President Nixon's ambassador to a make-believe Himalayan country named Nepal. Nearly gets us in a war against Albania . . . or something like that. I haven't seen it. It will undergo a survival course first. A tough one. It opens in New Haven, then goes to Philadelphia before opening on Broadway next month.

Anyhoo, Art, who ghostwrites for Toots Shor, is not doing very well with his "any resemblance" disclaimer. Joe Alsop's brother, Stewart, of Newsweek, accosted the famed playwright the other day and asked him if "Joe Mayflower" was, indeed, Joe Alsop.

"Absolutely not!" Art swore.

"Then how come people are now calling me Stewart Mayflower?" Joe's brother asked.

Sen. Strom Thurmond (D.-S.C.) holds the record for the longest speech ever made by a member of the upper house, 24 hours and 18 minutes. Sen. Phil Hart (D.-Mich.) may have made the shortest, the other night at an ecumenical and inter-racial dinner in New York. Speaking of Sen. Thurmond's good friend, Vice President Agnew, and noticing that the senior Senator from New York was at the head table, Sen. Hart said:

"When the Vice President went all the way to Memphis, Tenn. to denounce the New York Times, that was about as superfluous as somebody going to Cairo to denounce Jack Javits."

The most magnificent book of the year, not just the month, is David Douglas Duncan's monumental "Self-Portrait: U.S.A." published by Harry H. Abrams Inc. of New York, and printed in the Netherlands. It's the finest news-picture book I've ever seen, and it tells more about its prime subject — last year's Presidential conventions and those who peopled and polluted them — than any other study of those phenomena.

What gives Duncan's almost embarrassingly intimate pictures their full impact is that this incredible journalist wrote the captions himself. They are as superb as he is unique.

D.D.D. is out of Kansas City, Mo., a big college man in zoology and archaeology, has a rank of lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Marine Reserve. He fought against the Japanese with the guerrillas of Fiji, made the first landing in Japan, was aboard the U.S.S. Missouri when MacArthur brought the Japanese diplomats to the dotted line.

He has made good in more wars than Alexander, has been in more battles that Ray Robinson, has won more honors than the late, great and somewhat more secure Nicholas Murray Butler, If you want a permanent, rust-proof slab of 1968, save your money and buy Duncan. He's the only unsinkable stock.

"Mrs. Murphy was having a very very hard time getting along," writes my pal Johnny Toker, a Brooklynite who has written me a weekly letter since I arrived in New York in 1937. "Her neighbor, Mrs. Goldberg, told her to go to church, say the rosary, then stop the first man she met.

" 'Tell the man that God put a $20 bill in his pocket to give you,' Mrs. Goldberg recommended.

"The first man Mrs. Murphy met was a priest. She told the priest what she was told to say. The priest said, 'If there's a $20 bill in my pants pocket, I'll be very happy to give it to you. It will be the very first time in my life that I'll be seeing a miracle happen.'

"He put his hand in his pocket and, sure enough, a $20 bill was there. He gave it to Mrs. Murphy and hurried off to tell his fellow priests about the miracle. When he had finished his story, alas, the priest sitting next to him said, 'Bill, old boy, you owe me twenty bucks, and please stop wearing my pants.' "

Speaking Frankly

By MARY McGRATH

Be it ever so humble, some dang fool is going to call it the best darned school system in the world.

The kids may come out of it just a smidgen over the border line from stupidity, but if the majority manage to make it at all, if they have avoided a real riot all year, and if no one in the township has called for an impeachment of the school oard, then, by gum, the banners come out, and the horns are tooted for the greatness of the system.

The only time any of the educators may hint that the system is less than perfect is when they are attempting to hold up the community for more money for the teachers' payroll.

Unfortunately, such rousing rhetoric usually does little more than provide a smokescreen through which the most conscientious parent has difficulty seeing.

The truth of the matter is that it is almost impossible for the average parent to determine the worth of an educational system until it is too late to save the mental life of his child. Living in just one spot at a time, and being privy to only one set of standards at a time, parents have no set system of comparison.

If the child is learning to read at all, it is only when the parent finally finds out that Junior is still on "Dick and Jane" in the seventh grade that he begins to sit up and take notice.

Questioning the schoolteachers, principals, or guidance counselors is no help. If a parent appears to doubt the value of what they tell him, the school authorities will soon have him believing that it is the child who is a blot upon the system, instead of the other way around.

Since most parents lack the expertise to argue themselves out of that hole, they usually drop their inquiries there. It is only when the colleges of their kids' choice won't touch them with a 10-foot pole — and it is too late to change things — that they begin to see that they have been brainwashed by a system they didn't understand.

The amount of money spent on a per-pupil basis is no criterion, either. Most of that loot could be earmarked for buildings and extras, such as pools and parking lots, instead of equipment and the minds to use it.

All a parent can do is hope for the best, and push for the rest. Unfortunately, most parents are too confused about what a school should be doing to really care until the damage is done!

U.N. Blames Israel For Refugee Plight

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly blamed Israel Wednesday for the plight of refugees in Israeli-occupied Arab territory and asked the U.N. Security Council to assess their "grave situation."

By a vote of 48 to 22, with 47 abstentions, the Assembly adopted a resolution which also reaffirmed the "inalienable rights of the people of Palestine." That includes refugees of all the Arab-Israeli wars, now totaling 1.4 million, both within and outside areas taken by Israel in the June, 1967 conflict.

The yes votes were made up mostly of the Arab and Soviet bloc countries, and others with Moslem populations. The abstainers included Britain, France, most west Europeans and many African members.

U.S. AGAINST

The United States was the only major power voting against the resolution. Joseph E. Johnson, the U.S. delegate, said its approval would only jeopardize the search for a Middle East peace.

Yosef Tekoah, the Israeli ambassador, denounced the resolution as seeking to "aggravate and complicate the Middle East conflict."

He asserted the resolution received the support "only of a minority of member states, nearly all of them Arab delegations and their regular Soviet and Moslem supporters." He said it was clearly unacceptable to a majority of U.N. member countries.

In Jerusalem, an Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman said: "Israel will ignore this resolution."

He declared: "This is yet another in the list of one-sided propaganda resolutions pushed through by a minority consisting of Arab Communist and pro-Arab Moslem states . . . the sole effect is to encourage Arab extremism and to prejudice the quest for a Middle East peace."

But the Arabs hailed the outcome of the vote as a victory, and Khadim Khalaf, the Iraqi delegate, accused the United States of employing arm-twisting tactics, in an effort to defeat the resolution.

The United States argued that the resolution was a substantive one, requiring a two-thirds majority for approval in the assembly. But a motion opposing that view was adopted 50 to 47, with 21 abstentions.

NOT NECESSARY

As it turned out, the motion was not necessary since the resolution received more than the required two-thirds majority. Abstentions are not taken into account in determining the required majority.

The long-standing Palestine refugee problem is one of the major hurdles in attempts by the Big Four powers to come up with a peace formula acceptable to Israel and the Arabs.

The Assembly approved by overwhelming majority a resolution calling upon all governments as a matter of urgency to come up with generous voluntary financial contributions to support the U.N. Relief and Works Agency for Palestine refugees. Laurence Michelmore, the American director-general, has warned it is threatened with bankruptcy.

Another resolution similarly approved endorsed continued emergency aid to refugees displaced by the June, 1967 war.

Norco Stores To Stay Open An Extra Hour

The stores at the Norco Shopping Mall Plaza will stay open an extra hour Friday, in order to help area shoppers beat the holiday rush.

Gordon Engle, a director on the mall's association, said the merchants will keep their doors open until 11 p.m. Friday.

He also reported more than 200 patients at Pennhurst State School received candy canes and gifts, while visiting with Santa Claus at the shopping plaza.

On Tuesday and Wednesday of the past two weeks, more than 50 patients were bussed to the mall to chat with Santa and see the various holiday window displays.

Engle said this was the first year for this program, and he believes it will continue each year.

Nixon Seeks $40 Million Culture Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon asked Congress Wednesday to approve a $40-million program to promote culture—including proposals to do more for museums and symphony orchestras and even to probe the generation gap.

The $40 million would compare with roughly $20 million under the current program.

In a special message, Nixon asked Congress to appropriate $35 million for the arts and humanities in the fiscal year that begins next July 1. The other $5 million, Nixon estimated, would come from private contributions which swell the total federal program because they would be channeled into government trust funds which show up in the annual budget.

INCREASE GRANTS

Nancy Hanks, chairman of the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities, told reporters the Nixon program would increase grants to the states and, for the first time, involve a major effort to help support hard-pressed museums and symphonies.

In the field of the humanities, Nixon outlined one of his objectives:

"We would be able to broaden and deepen humanistic research into the basic causes of the divisions between the races and generations, learning ways to improve communication within American society and bringing the lessons of our history to bear on the problems of our future."

Another essential feature of the Nixon proposal was that Congress extend the life of the national foundation for three years beyond its scheduled death, under current law, next June 30.

Miss Hanks, after meeting with the President, said Nixon views his arts-humanities program as an integral part of his 1970 legislative program. Obviously, the chief executive does not expect Congress at this late date, to deal with his recommendations until next year.

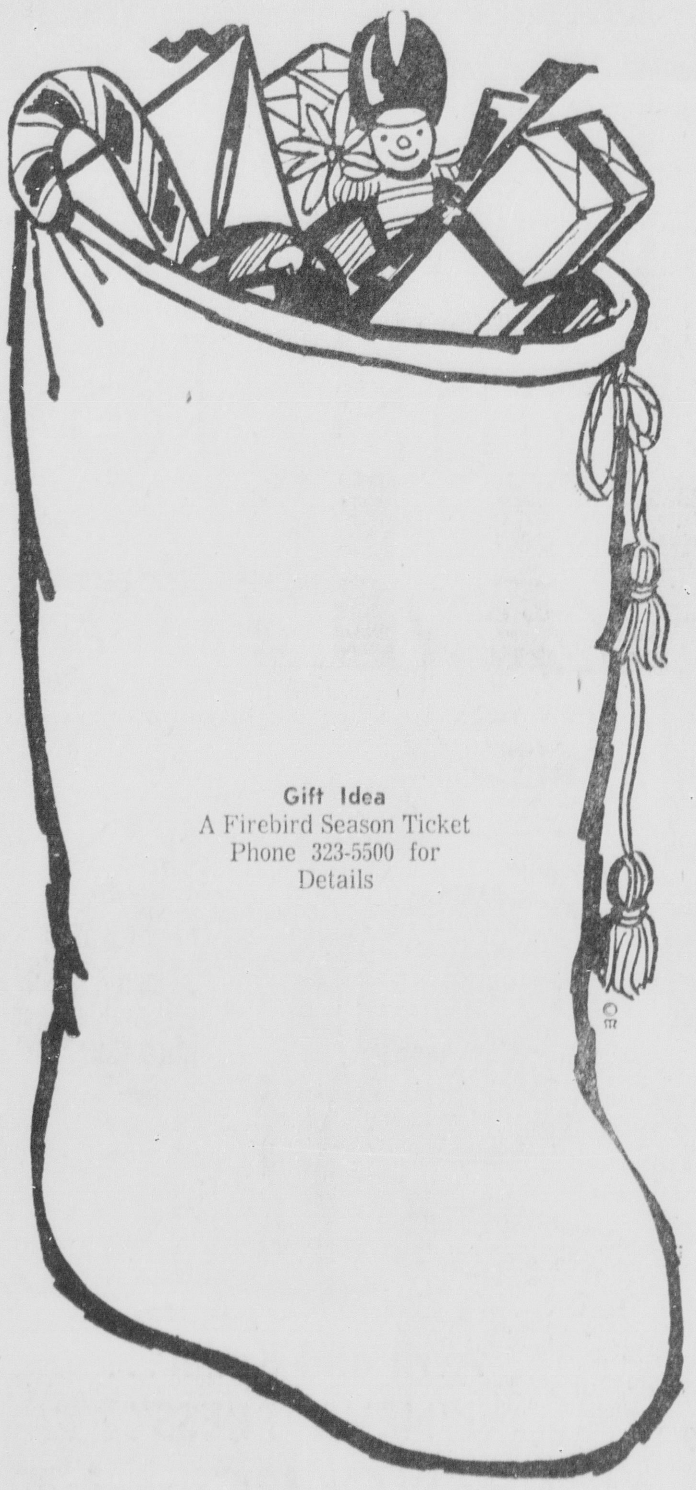
In his message, Nixon said.

"At a time of severe budget stringency, a doubling of the appropriation for the arts and humanities might seem extravagant. However, I believe that the need for a new impetus to the understanding and expression of the American idea has a compelling claim on our resources."

In the past, he said, "every dollar of federal money has generated $3 from other sources," in support of music, the theater, the encouragement of creative writers, research in the humanities and support for such institutions as museums and orchestras.

"The federal government cannot and should not seek to substitute public money" for private support of such undertakings, the President asserted.

But he said more federal help is needed because many privately backed cultural institutions face an "acute financial crisis."



Military Junta Overthrows African Country of Dahomey

COTONOU, Dahomey (AP) — A military junta overthrew Dahomey's government in a burst of gunfire Wednesday in one of the half-dozen coups since the West African country gained independence from France in 1960.

Rumors that President Emile Derlin Zinsou had been shot and killed along with five palace guards could not be confirmed.

A military vehicle was reported to have blocked Zinsou's limousine as he traveled from his villa to the presidential palace, and shooting broke out between his bodyguard and men in the vehicle.

The coup was believed headed by Lt. Col. Maurice Kouandete, the former premier. Kouandete, in a nationwide radio speech Wednesday night, appealed to all former Dahomey leaders now living abroad to return to the country.

Dahomey, on the underside of the West African bulge, has about three million people and is one of Africa's most unstable countries as well as one of its smallest.

As the coup came, orders went out immediately to close all borders and sever telecommunications.

The closing came as thousands of Nigerians expelled from Ghana still waited to cross into their home country. Trucks and buses backed up for hundreds of yards by the day's end. From the Nigerian side, 40 trucks were parked by the road.

In the past, Dahomey's coups have been bloodless, with deposed leaders exiled.

Business Reflects Skill of a Family

Philadelphia Avenue in Boyertown was little more than a dirt lane in 1869 when Levi H. LeFevre opened his store there. The dirt turned to brick and then became macadam and all the while men of the LeFevre family minded the store.

Walter Le Fevre, present owner of the department store, is the last of those men. He grew up in a house next to his grandfather's store and in 1922 he went to work there.

"When the store first started," he noted, "it was a real old-fashioned general store with groceries, dry goods, just about everything. People used to come in with lard and go home with apron gingham.

"Around the turn of the century, it became a full three-story department store," he continued. "Altogether, it's undergone five renovations. Five additions were put on and five new fronts, but the shell still is the original store building."

$5 DRESS

Le Fevre said he remembered when price tags on men's suits were marked no higher than $29.50 and ladies' dresses cost a dollar. "A $5 dress was a pretty good dress in 1915," he noted.

"A lot of yard goods were sold then, too," he noted. "We stocked ginghams, percales, all kinds of material, and people often spent a half day shopping.

"After a time, yard goods became much less popular," he added, "but in the last five or six years they've made a very strong comeback."

Furniture was added to the store's stock some 60 years ago, and Le Fevre said he believed the price of a brass bed in 1912 was $5.

OPERA HOUSE

In those days, a lot across the street from the store was occupied by the Rhoads Opera House. A catastrophic fire occurred there in 1913, claiming 173 lives and providing Le Fevre with one of his earliest memories.

"I was 2½ at the time and we were living directly across from the opera house," he said. "All I can remember is that it was in the evening and I saw what looked like lights falling from the building's third floor. I found out later they weren't lights. They were people."

Le Fevre said his store, like many others, experienced merchandise shortages during World War II. "You couldn't get overalls, denims, or work shirts," he said. "But I was lucky enough to get nylon stockings through one of my suppliers. Customers formed lines outside the store to buy them and we sold only one pair to each customer."

Things looked better after the war, not only for women's legs, but for the store as well. A Hammond concert organ was installed in 1949. "Wanamaker's was always my ideal for a department store," Le Fevre said, "and that was about as close as I could come.

ORGANIST

"We had a full-time organist for quite awhile, but now we usually have organists only for special holidays. There's also a speaker on the roof, so we can pipe the music outside if we care to."

When his grandfather opened the store, there were three employes, Le Fevre said. "Those three would include my grandfather, my uncle, and one hired person," he noted. "We have 18 people working here now, including part-time help. Part-time makes up quite a bit of the employment picture today and long-time employes seem to be a thing of the past."

Loyal customers may also be a thing of the past. "You don't have a customer you can call your own anymore," Le Fevre noted. "Years ago, you could actually refer to people that way, but nowadays there are shopping centers and discount stores and people shop around more than before. They'll also travel farther to shop than before.

"Our oldest customer is 93 and lives in Bally," he continued. "His name is John Longacre and he's been a loyal customer for as long as I can remember. I saw him here not too long ago, in fact."

NEW FACES

A corresponding change the storeowner noted was the number of new faces among his customers. "I used to know nearly everybody who came into the store," he said. "Now I don't know 25 per cent of them. It surprises me sometimes when I realize I'm selling to my fourth generation of customers."

Le Fevre is proud of the service his store offers. "One advantage we have is that we'll go out of our way to help customers who need special sizes and shapes of clothing. I spend a good portion of my trips to New York looking for this special apparel, but it's worth it, even though a lot of stores wouldn't dream of doing it."

One reason it is "worth it" is because Le Fevre has a name and a tradition to uphold. The footsteps he follows belong not only to his grandfather, but to two uncles and his father as well. But times change, the outlook for businesses like his is not optimistic.

"I'm afraid the age of the family store is finished," Le Fevre said. "It takes a lot of work and a lot of long hours, and you don't do it unless you're really interested. And they tell me young people just aren't interested anymore."

Eight Ponies, To Pull Sleigh For Santa

Santa Claus is going to pay a visit to the Palm-East Greenville area Sunday beginning 12:30 p.m. but he won't have presents for the children; he'll have oranges.

A bright red sleigh with Santa and two drivers will be winding its way through Palm, Red Hill, East Greenville, and Pennsburg drawn by eight ponies.

The sleigh is owned by Kurney Spaar, Palm, who with his family has been riding through the area for the past seven years dressed as Santa and friends and handing out oranges to the children along the way.

RED HILL

This year the trip will be sponsored by Red Hill Savings & Loan Association.

The sleigh which is mounted on wheels will be decorated with Christmas toys and tinsel.

Barrel Prize Is $600

Area shoppers will have until 8 p.m. tonight to register for this week's $600 lucky barrel prize at Mill End Fabric Shop, 213 High St.

Sponsored by the Downtown Pottstown Business Association, the contest registration deadline has been extended over the holiday season giving residents more time to register.

TODAY AND YESTERDAY — Levi H. LeFevre, founder of the Boyertown store that bears his name, stands next to a horse and wagon, top. Inscribed on the wagon is "Le Fever Bros." The original store building still stands beneath the facade of the present structure, inset. Radically changed since its days as a general store, a portion of the department store's interior is shown, bottom. At right is Walter LeFevre, grandson of the founder, and behind him at the adding machine is Mrs. Emma Erb. The store is celebrating its 100th anniversary.

Self-Sustaining Budget Areas Concern Vital Services

(Editor's note: This is the third and concluding part of the three-part series outlining the 1970 operating budget for Pottstown municipal government.)

By JOSEPH E. DOUGHERTY
Mercury Staff Writer

While the general fund portion of any community's annual budget usually is the largest single category, there are many other non-general fund entries which total well above the general fund.

These categories usually are self-sustaining, meaning they have sufficient income from sources not directly attributed to taxes to cover all expenditures.

In Pottstown's 1970 budget, to which borough council gave tentative approval Monday night, there are 19 other categories in addition to the general fund.

Little notice ever is taken of them because whenever there is a tax hike it is used only for the general fund.

JUST AS VITAL

But they are just as vital to the well being of borough residents as the general fund and in some cases even more so.

The Water Revenue Fund is a good example. Without it there would be no water for cooking, drinking and bathing in the borough.

It's budgeted this year at $748,294. This is a $226,000 reduction over the 1969 budget, with the major saving coming from a redctio in the amount needed to pay off outstanding debts.

And much of the more than $600,000 last year in debt service went to paying off bonds used to finance construction of the Pottstown Water Treatment Plant. The 1970 budget contains an entry of only $361,000 for debt service, indicating a continual reduction in the amount owed.

The largest source of income to balance the Water Revenue Fund is water rent, the fee paid by people using borough water.

SEWER FUND

The Sewer Revenue Fund is budgeted for 1970 at $438,360, up $5,000 from the 1969 budget.

This increase is more than offset by an increase in revenue through sewer rental charges and the initiation of a fee system for the two hospitals, which formerly received water and sewer service free.

PARKING LOTS

There are eight separate funds for the eight municipal parking lots in the borough and they reflect income through parking meters and expenditures for repayment of bonds, capital improvements and maintenance costs plus rental fees in cases where the borough leases the properties from private owners.

Total receipts and expenditures for all eight parking lots is $49,749.

AIRPORT FUNDS

There are two separate budget categories for the Pottstown Municipal Airport. One is for maintenance and the other for improvement.

The Airport Improvement Fund reflects a total of $11,090 in receipts and a matching figure for expenditures.

A total of $11,000 will be received from a lease-rental agreement with John Basco, airport manager. The remaining $90 is a surplus from the 1969 budget

In the expenditure column, $2,650 will be for Basco's salary, $500 for labor and supplies, $1,000 for major maintenance, $250 for electricity and the balance of $6,600 will be transferred to the Airport Improvement Fund.

That amount, plus an anticipated federal grant of $17,500 will comprise all of the $24,146 listed as income in the Airport Improvement Fund.

Expenditures, of a like amount, will include $2,000 for paving a runway; $1,000 for legal costs; $19,600 payment on a temporary loan and $1,500 in interest on that loan.

CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT

The Capital Improvement Fund is a catch-all allocation providing for many items of borough necessity.

Expenditures from this account will be for street construction, construction of curbing, sidewalks and sanitary sewers, purchase of a street sweeper, payment of previous street loans and interest.

Balancing the $377,827 expenditure listing will be an equal amount raised through street, curb, sidewalk and sanitary sewer assessments to property owners, interest earned, highway aid money from the state and a transfer from the general fund.

HIGHWAY AID FUND

Income for the Highway Aid Fund's total expenditure of $80,608 comes from a surplus of $4,510; $75,398 in a state motor license fund grant and $700 interest on unused funds.

It will be used for street signs and markings, salaries, materials, an overlay program, snow - removal, budgeted at $6,000, street construtcion and installation of storm sewers.

STREET SIDEWALK

The Street, Sidewalk Escrow Fund was set up in 1953 as a depository for funds from property owners guaranteeing payment for street, sidewalk and curb assessments.

It is budgeted at $8,418, which is the cash balance remaining from the 1969 budget. Listed as expenditures are a transfer to another fund of $7,910 and a built-in surplus of $508.

BETHANY CENTER

The Bethany Center Fund is a relatively new one designed to handle federal and state grants awarded to the neighborhood facility project, plus the borough's contribution.

Income and expenditures are set at $279,342. Of this amount, the federal grant, already approved, will be $203,064, a contingenty fund will hold $43,250, and an allocation of $3,750 is included as a salary for the "clerk of the works."

CHERRY AREA FUNDS

There are two separate categories for the Cherry Area Neighborhood Improvement and Code Enforcement project.

One is the general account for federal rehabilitation and code enforcement grants and state grants. Receipts and expenditures from this fund will total $168,673.

The other is an escrow fund which serves as a depository for federal loans to property owners. Income and expenditures for this fund will be $196,235.

LIBRARY FUND

The 1970 budget also contains a separate fund for the Pottstown Public Library.

The borough contributes to this fund each year. The money comes from the general fund and this year's allocation is $40,500.

Receipts and expenditures for the library balance at $69,673.

Separation of the various funds is a tedious and complicated task requiring a duplication of bookkeeping effort unheard of in the 19th Century when all borough transactions were handled by cash, and with the cash coming from the same tin box in the borough office, regardless of what the expenditure was for.

Government, paralleling society, has come a long way since the 19th century.

The strides are called "progress," but there's a two word definition of that condition which the budget reflects — "more money."

Students Vs. Society Around the World—Part IV

Britain's Polite Rebels Frustrated by Lack of Issues

By MARVIN KUPFER
Mercury Staff Writer

LONDON — For British students in search of a popular radical cause, the going has not been easy of late.

They haven't had issues like civil rights or the Vietnam war to push as the Americans have, for example, or a stern, authoritarian figure like Charles deGaulle to challenge as the French have. As a result, they've had to settle for relatively trivial campus issues.

The biggest recent student outburst in Britain erupted at the London School of Economics (LSE) and it involved nothing more cosmic than the installation of iron gates in the school's buildings.

But a mixed bag of young activists — Marxists, Trotskyists, Maoists and plain old anarchists — claimed that the gates threatened to turn the school into a concentration camp. So they smashed seven of them. The administration responded by closing down the school for three weeks and suspending 13 student ringleaders.

Students at other British universities then rallied to the LSE cause, staging demonstrations at York, Warwick, Kent, Essex and even prestigious Cambridge University. There, 1,000 students horrified authorities by occupying the main administration building for 12 hours before they decided they'd made their point and dispersed.

Aside from this celebrated war of the iron gates, though, British campuses have generally been peaceful.

It's not that the British students are necessarily less leftist or radical than their rebellious peers in other countries. It's just that as products of a generally restrained and genteel society, they're more polite and less militant about it.

"We're a bit too civilized for violence," says Cambridge student Derek Hirst. "It would need quite an impetus to change that. If (right-wing radical) Enoch Powell got in, then you might see a revolt."

Beyond that, a student subculture does not get as much of a chance to develop as it does in most other Western countries, because many of the students go to school for only six months and graduate after three years. Other peace-keeping factors are the strong pull of parliamentary tradition and the fact that university officials seem to be able to take the sting out of some student protests by gracefully accepting their demands.

SOCIETY LIKE SPONGE

"This society is like a sponge," complains one frustrated LSE radical. "As soon as you get something going, the society just absorbs it."

Still, the seeds of discontent are definitely there, and they seem to be growing.

"When I came up in 1963," reports Peter Sheldrake, a young Cambridge anthropology don, "there were a few groups sitting around with radical ideas, but only about English politics on a large scale. But there's been a change since 1967 when things began to happen . . . and particular disputes began finding ventilation in a more general atmosphere of discontent."

In fact, even Oxford University, with its rural setting and gentlemanly traditions, recently felt a few of the shockwaves of revolt. When Oxford staged its traditional matriculation ceremony for new students this fall, 200 upperclassmen organized a simultaneous demonstration designed to mock the solemn pretensions of the occasion. They dressed up in gaudy clothing and masks, then sang, danced and play kazoos outside the theater where the ceremony was held.

REASON FOR CARNIVAL

"We staged this carnival to expose the ludicrous character of what was going on," one of the demonstration leaders explained.

"Matriculation is just a symbol of the outmoded traditions which continue to constrict our lives."

Outmoded traditions, as it happens, are one of the few things that seem to strike a responsive chord in most British students.

One cause that has rallied wide support among students at Oxford and at other universities is the administrations' longstanding policy of requiring cleaning women to report on dormitory sexual activity. The students' feelings have been best expressed by a sign in an Oxford dorm that reads: "Equal rights for heterosexuals! Abolish women's hours".

Whether student militants will ever get anywhere with more serious causes in Britain is problematical at the moment.

'Once you're away from here," remarks an LSE student, "all the complaints by the radicals just don't seem so important anymore. Having fun and earning money seem the important thing and I can't get excited about overcrowded classrooms.

"More and more, I think protesting is just part of being a student."

King Gustav of Sweden Bestows Nobel Medals

STOCKHOLM (AP) — King Gustav VI Adolf of Sweden bestowed Nobel gold medals and $300,000 in prize money Wednesday at ceremonies before a white-tie audience of 2,000.

The prizes went to American, British and Norwegian scientists, to Irish playwright Samuel Beckett and to Norwegian and Dutch economists. In Oslo, the Nobel Peace Prize was presented to the International Labor Organization.

Becket, who seldom appears in public, was not present to receive his award. It was accepted for him by his French publisher, Jerome Linden. Ragnar Frisch, cowinner of the new economics prize, was absent because of a broken leg. His prize was accepted by a colleague, Prof. Johannes Andenaes.

Each of the five prizes was worth $72,800.

First to receive his prize was Prof. Murray Gell-Mann, 40, of the California Institute of Technology, whom the 86-year-old king called "the Einstein of our age." Gell-Mann was honored for his work in elementary particle physics.

The prize in medicine was shared by three Americans for their work in virus research—German-born Prof. Max Delbrueck, 64, of California Institute of Technology; Italian-born Prof. Salvador E. Luria, 57, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dr. Alfred D. Hershey, 61, a native of Michigan who directs the Carnegie Institute department for genetic research at Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y.

The chemistry prize was shared by Prof. Odd Hassel, 71, of Oslo University, and Prof. Derek H. Barton, 51, of Imperial College in London, for their work to develop and apply the "concept of confirmation" in chemistry.

Dr. Karl Ragnar Gierow, secretary of the Swedish Academy of Letters, said the "muffled minor key" of Beckett's writing sounded "liberation to the oppressed and comfort to those in need."

The literary prize winner, most noted for the obscure plays "Waiting for Godot" and "Endgame," was born in Ireland in 1906 but has lived much of his adult life in France. He writes in English and in French.

'Acme is my kind of place' says Mrs. George Pizzi of Philadelphia

"Acme is my kind of place and has been for a long time. The reason I shop at Acme is very simple . . . their meats. The Lancaster Brand meats are always fresh and tender, and the meat department is always kept so clean. I really enjoy cooking Lancaster Brand meats because they always end up tasting so good. If I want a special cut of meat, that's no problem. The meat people at Acme are always glad to help me. Another great thing about the meats at Acme is that they don't cost any more: usually they're less than at other stores. I am a quality buyer, and Acme's meats are just tops in quality.

Santa and the DUMBBELL

By Lucrece Beale

By LUCRECE BEALE
AP Newsfeatures

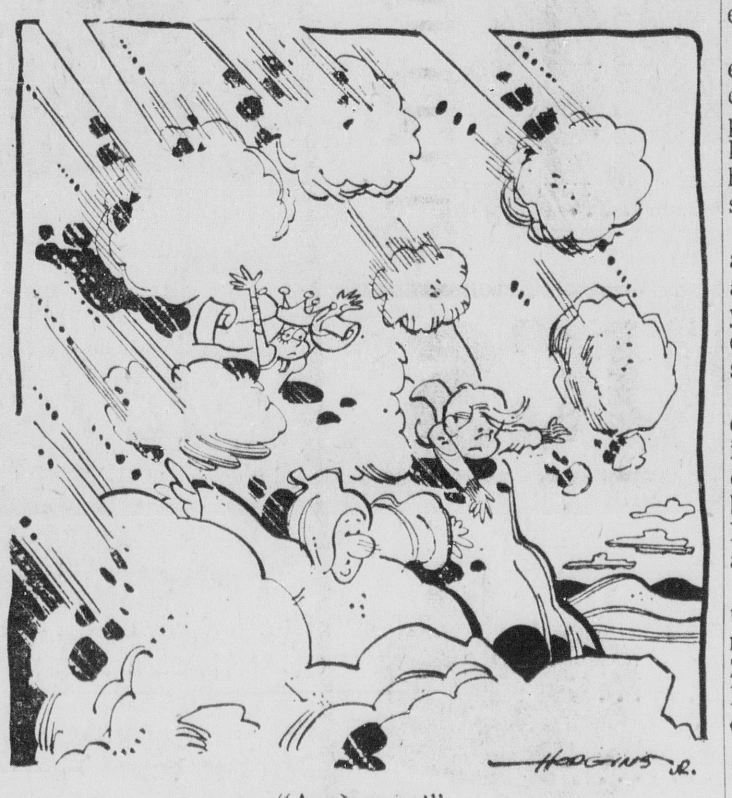
Synopsis: Booby Bobby, Stanley the Ghost, and the Puppet Princess are marooned on a desert island. A family of ghosts tells them they can get to Santa Land if Booby Bobby wishes hard enough.

CHAPTER EIGHT
AVALANCHE!

POOR Booby Bobby! He was so intent on using all his heart and all his might to make his wish come true that the words got mixed up in his head. Instead of wishing to be in Santa Land he wished to be in Snow Land which is not the same thing at all.

When he opened his eyes and looked around he found himself at the top of a mountain of snow but there was not a sign of Santa Land.

"Everyone is right," he said wretchedly. "I am a dumbbell." Stanley the Ghost and the Princess, who found themselves sitting beside him, tried to reassure him.



"Avalanche!"

"NOT TOO FAR OFF"

"Santa Land can't be too far off," said Stanley. "We know Santa Land has snow and this must be most of the snow in the world."

"I could try wishing again," said Booby Bobby.

"No," said the Ghost. "One wish is enough to spend on this trip. Besides it is probably true that only one such wish works in a lifetime."

"What shall we do now?" asked the Princess in a small voice, shivering more than ever.

"Walk," said the Ghost. "After all, it's all down hill."

Now mountains in winter time are very tricky. One minute it is sunny and the next minute a cloud drops down and you can't see at all. When Booby Bobby and the Ghost and the Princess started down they could see the bottom of the mountain quite clearly. It seemed to be at a reasonable distance. But the snow was soft. They sank to their hips at every step. After three hours they had hardly made any progress. The bottom of the mountain was as far off as ever. And now they couldn't see the bottom or even their hands in front of their faces. A white cloud had descended. They were lost in a fog.

The Princess held Booby Bobby's hand and Booby Bobby held Stanley's trailing sheets. The Ghost shouted at the top of his voice, "Follow me! Follow me!"

This was a mistake, for his voice, echoing up and down the mountain, loosened a cliff of overhanging snow. There was a sudden clap! and a far-off rumbling getting louder and louder until it was booming, thundering, roaring coming down the mountain.

The Ghost screamed, "Avalanche!"

Booby Bobby clung to the Princess's hand. He lost hold of Stanley's sheet, fell and grabbed his ankle. Just in time The avalanche picked them up and hurled them head over heels, somersaulting, topsy-turvy, down the mountain in a river of snow.

When they came to a stop they were buried under the snow. The Puppet Princess's nose had broken off. Stanley's sheets were ripped from his head. Booby Bobby had two black eyes. But they were still together.

They began to tunnel out of the snow but they were so upside down they couldn't tell whether they were going up or down or sideways. They decided each would tunnel in a different direction. One would have to be right.

After hours of digging, Booby Bobby's head broke above the ground. He leaned over his tunnel and shouted, "Come this way! I'm out."

He sat back to wait for the others. As he sank back, he felt an awful twinge and the jaws of some fearful creature locked around his seat.

Astronomers Find Formaldehyde in Space

NEW YORK (AP) — Astronomers are finding abundances of formaldehyde in interstellar space, far more than expected, a discovery that may change ideas of the evolution of life on earth.

The fact that formaldehyde exists at all in space was discovered only last March. Its presence strongly suggests that key biological molecules, perhaps amino acids, also exist in space.

And now, finding that there apparently is much more formaldehyde in the galaxy than anyone expected, the chances of complex molecules existing in space is far greater.

The latest details were reported Wednesday to the 131st meeting of the American Astronomical Society, and in an interview by David Buhl of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank, W. Va.

Buhl and Lewis E. Snyder of the observatory made the original discovery, with Benjamin Zuckerman of the University of Maryland and Patrick Palmer of the University of Chicago.

KEY ROLE

Buhl said formaldehyde—believed to play a key role in life processes—is an indication that methane also is present in space. Methane, ammonia and water are essential for the formation of life.

Ammonia and water also exist in space, both discovered only months before the formaldehyde discovery.

A leading theory for the origin of life on earth has been that these elements existed on earth and, perhaps by a flash of lightning in the primeval atmosphere, combined to create the basic building blocks of life.

But Buhl said it now appears possible that the more comples molecules existed first in space—that biological evolution began there and not on earth—and that the molecules came to earth in gas clouds.

This process would support the widely held belief of scientists that life has arisen on many other planets in the Milky Way and other galaxies.

Buhl and his colleagues have been measuring the amount of formaldehyde in this galaxy with the 140-foot dish antenna of the Green Bank observatory.

"It appears to be much more abundant than we expected," he said. "This lends much more hope to finding more complex molecules."

Buhl said originally one would have expected, based on statistics, to find one formaldehyde molecule for every 450 oxygen-hydrogen molecules in space. Instead, he reported, there now appears to be one for every 10.

The formaldehyde molecule consists of two hydrogen atoms, an oxygen atom and a carbon atom.

The next step in this investigation into the origins of life, Buhl said, may be to find methane in space, perhaps attached to ammonia.

The formaldehyde was discovred by observing that radio emissions passing through distant gas clouds on the way to earth were being absorbed at a wave length of about six centimeters, which is characteristic of formaldehyde.

HERE'S A SWITCH

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A new stoplight switch for trucks and trailers that has been turned on and off in a million tests without failing has been developed by engineers of the Williams Air Controls Division of Omark Industries. The engineers claim the switch is so reliable that a driver could apply his brakes 50 times a day for 20,000 days—54.8 years—without having to replace it.

Church Receives Eight Persons Into Membership

Received as new members of Cedarville United Methodist Church, 1092 Laurelwood Road, North Coventry Township, were Leroy Bordlemay, transferred from Lykens United Methodist Church, Lykens; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Walters; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ogden, transferred from Schuylkill Haven United Methodist Church, Schuylkill Haven, and Mr. and Mrs. Marlin Miller and daughter, Colette, transferred from Bethel United Methodist Church, Pittsburgh.

Named ushers for December were William Hohl, William Leypoldt Sr., Bruce Dickinson and Andrew Alexander.

The congregation adopted a 1970 budget at a congregational meeting in the church. Totals were presented for current expenses, benevolence funds and building fund.

The youth groups of the church plan carolling Dec. 21 in the community. Vicki Hohl and John Shankweiler will arrange the tour.

A Christmas nativity pageant will be given by the chancel choir 5:30 P.M. Sunday at the church. A film, "The Other Wise Man," will be shown. Carol singing will follow supper.

A Christmas Eve candlelight service is being planned. Weather permitting, candles will be taken outdoors by those attending, and a friendship circle formed beneath the church's new steeple. There will be a nursery for the youngest children.

Youth groups are planning a contemporary service of worship Dec. 28 at the church in observance of Student Recognition Day.

A mitten tree is being decorated in the narthex of the new church. Also received will be boots, rubbers and socks. Mrs. Doris Loscig was named chairman of a committee to decorate the church sanctuary with poinsettia plants for Christmas services.

The study shows that school children make heroes of politicians. Education makes strange bedfellows.

Santa Claus is supposed to have originated in Turkey. He looks like it was the other way around.

Blue Chip Rally Erases Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — A late rally boosting blue chips helped the stock market erase some sharp earlier losses Wednesday and close with prices mixed.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 0.20 to 783.99 after being down more than 5 points.

"Investors moved in to pick up some low priced bargains," said Monte Gordon of Bache & Co., commenting on the rally, "but the full testing process is not completed," he added.

The problems plaguing investors during the markets recent steady slide remain basically the same, analysts said. They are predictions of continued tight-money policies and talk of a 1970 recession.

Trading had been moderate but picked up during the price rise and ended fairly active on a turnover of 12.6 million shares.

Despite the Dow's moderate gain, stocks that dropped in price outnumbered advances by 840 to 501 among the 1,612 individual issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

There were 351 new lows for the year and only 1 new high, G. D. Searle, up 1½ to 48¼.

The AP 60-stock average rose .6 to 266.6, with industrials up .2, rails up .6, and utilities up .5.

The New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,200 common stocks dipped 0.04 to 50.47.

In major categories, chemicals, oils, tobaccos, building materials and drugs were lower. On the upswing were steels, rubber issues, electronics, utilities and rails.

Institutional activity, measured by trading in blocks of 10,000 shares or more, slowed from the previous session. There were 56 such blocks traded, compared with 73 on Tuesday.

Among the 20 most-active Big Board stocks, 14 declined, and 6 advanced.

Six of the actives fell to new yearly lows. They were Gulf Oil ⅜ to 27⅝, General Motors, Texaco ⅛ to 27⅛, Amerada-Hess ⅞ to 29⅞, Atlantic Richfield 2⅛ to 82⅞, and Monangahela Industries ½ to 19.

Medical Leaders Hope to Restore Cuts in Research Budget

NEW YORK (AP) — Medical leaders are making last-ditch efforts to restore cuts in the proposed federal budget for medical research.

Reductions contemplated in a bill now before Congress could have crippling effects upon the nation's health, they say.

Among them:

—Postponement of controls over heart disease, cancer and other diseases.

—Slowdowns in delivering better health care, far more widely.

—A decrease in the supply of future doctors and medical scientists.

—Loss of highly trained technicians who will leave medical research for industrial jobs and never return.

The Senate is scheduled soon to consider the report of an appropriations committee, headed by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., which has heard dozens of witnesses.

The Nixon administration's requested budget for the National Institutes of Health research programs for 1970 was $7 million less than last year. A House subcommittee voted $1.2 million more than the administration asked.

MINOR PROJECTS

Those favoring a reduction hold that many research projects are minor or duplicative, and that no government department should be exempt from the need to cut national spending.

Dr. Roger O. Egeberg, assistant secretary for health, announced a 5 per cent cut in the $331.2 million the National Institutes of Health had planned to spend this fiscal year for continued support of current research projects and a 10 per cent cut from the $131.4 million allocated for new research projects.

Egeberg said the research cuts are part of a government-wide effort to help stop inflation through budget trimming.

The health institutes had taken the temporary step Aug. 14 of planning a 20 pr cent cut in the 2,500 research grants which were up for renewal in September, but the action later was rescinded.

"Assuming enactment of the health budget as proposed by the administration, we will not have to effect reductions as substantial as 20 per cent," Egeberg said.

Dr. Robert Q. Marston, National Institutes director, said it is likely that as many as 19 of the 93 government-supported experimental clinical research centers will have to be closed next year.

"Rising costs, changing technology and changing programs have caused us to examine the possibility that it might further the program objectives to operate fewer clinical centers of higher quality rather than spread the funds among all centers," Egeberg said.

The research grants cut and a 10 per cent loss due to inflation is "an enormous decrease, and it marks four years of going downhill" in research support, says Dr. Sidney Farber of the Children's Cancer Research Foundation, Boston, and immediate past president of the American Cancer society.

"The most striking and devastating effect will be in the training and fellowship area," where young workers gain their experience through being brought into research projects, he adds. "If we can't keep young people, and maintain those already doing work, we lose the most precious possession we have. The danger is we may lose a whole generation of trained personnel."

Budget cuts for research and other health programs threaten to cripple dozens of scientific projects in which hundreds of millions have been invested, and which are about to pay off with expectably valuable new knowledge, says Dr. Lewis E. January of Iowa City, Iowa, a past president of the American Heart Association.

"Conservative medical men estimate we will soon be in position to save an additional 150,000 lives yearly from heart disease and cancer, provided we have funds to apply the knowledge we have already amassed for managing many forms of these dread diseases," he says.

"If the health budget cutbacks are put into effect, most or all of these 150,000 lives may go down the drain."

Dr. Michael E. DeBakey, Houston heart surgeon, says the momentum in research achievement and delivery of health care "is being seriously jeopardized at a time when we are trying to expand medical instruction to increase health manpower and the number of physicians."

Speaking for large medical centers, Dr. Sherman Kupfer, associate dean for research administration at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine, New York, thinks a big impact will be on clinical investigations, with many projects involving major and puzzling diseases having to be curtailed or dropped.

"It took us 20 years to get where we are with the growth of the National Institutes of Health," he says. "I'm concerned we will lose within a year all that we built up.

"When such programs are reduced, we lose our people and lose them for good. Physicians go into practice. Highly skilled technicians go into industry, wherever the market is."

Casey Says He'll Reject Bossism in His Nomination Campaign

By TONY MAY
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG (AP) — Auditor Gen. Robert P. Casey said Wednesday he will reject bossism in his campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination next year but will seek the support of both the party organization and splinter groups.

"I don't intend to accept or solicit the support of anyone who intends to control me or dictate to me," Casey said at a news conference called to kick off his second bid for the nomination.

He ran in 1966 but was beaten in the primary by Milton J. Shapp, who already is one of three other declared candidates for the 1970 nomination.

Casey, a 37-year-old Scranton attorney who won the race for auditor general last year by some 450,000 votes over his Republican challenger, Warner Depuy, said he was avoiding political bosses "because I think that I have an obligation to the people of Pennsylvania to look them in the eye and say I am a candidate for governor and if you vote for me I will do your will and your wishes."

He made the statement after pledging to seek the "support of all Democrats — the newly constituted (endorsement) committee as well as independent groups, the New Democratic Coalition (NDC), the mayor of the City of Pittsburgh Mr. Peter Flaherty, and Congressman William Green in Philadelphia."

STRESSES STAND

Asked if he intentionally left out Philadelphia Mayor James H. J. Tate, leader of the city's ward machine, Casey replied he did not "for any particular reason" but stressed his anti-bossism stand.

"I will take an oath to carry out my program, in the public interest and no one, no individual, or no group within or outside the party will cause me to sway from that obligation," said the auditor general.

Asked if Tate "has tried to control" him, Casey replied, "No he has not."

Tate was quoted this fall as saying he would support Casey for governor "if he keeps his nose clean."

Casey was also questioned whether his running for governor would compromise his auditor general campaign issue in 1968 that the person who audits the state's books should be of a different party than the governor.

Casey said if he is successful in his run for governor, he would "appoint a professional to the job of auditor general — either a man with legal training or a certified public accountant completely independent of any control of me."

He added: "we aren't going to deal with party labels at this time."

In addition to Shapp, a Philadelphia millionaire who lost the 1966 general election to Republican Raymond P. Shafer by nearly a quarter million votes, the Democratic race includes Senate Minority Leader Ernest P. Kline, D-Beaver, and Edward F. Cooke, Allegheny County treasurer.

BETTER CAMPAIGNS

Shapp, who waged a bitter "man against the machine" campaign against Casey and the Democratic organization that endorsed the Scranton lawyer in 1966, greeted his entry into the race Wednesday with a new question about endorsement.

He said the revised Democratic State Committee procedure regarding endorsement "is the same old policy committee in a maxi-outer garment."

Shapp said he would not seek the endorsement as Casey and Kline have said they would.

He also asked, in a statement issued in Philadelphia, what Casey would do about a pledge "during his 1968 campaign for his present office that he would serve the full term."

Thus far, Casey has served about half a year as auditor general, stirring up a number of controversies over state procurement procedures and alleged waste in state government.

He referred to his experience as auditor general plus previous experience in government as a one-term state senator and vice president of the state Constitutional Convention in urging that "whoever is elected governor must have experience in government."

Christmas pudding can be made early

A handsome Mincemeat Walnut Pudding can be made days before the holiday meal. It is served warm with a foamy lemon sauce.

1 jar (1 pound 12 ounces) mincemeat
2 eggs, beaten
4 slices wheat bread, cut in ½ inch cubes
½ cut firmly packed light brown sugar
1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped walnuts

Pour beaten eggs over bread cubes, mixing well. Stir in brown sugar until dissolved. Sift together flour, baking soda and salt. Stir mincemeat and dry ingredients alternately into egg mixture. Fold in walnuts. Pour into well greased 6-cup mold. Cover mold with double thickness of aluminum foil, pressing around top to secure. Place in container holding water to depth of 1 to 2 inches. Cover and steam over low heat for 3 hours. Remove foil and let stand 15 minutes. Invert pudding on plate and remove mold, serve warm with Foamy Lemon Sauce. Pudding may be refrigerated and reheated. Serves 10 to 12.

1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1-3 cup butter or margarine
2 to 3 tablespoons lemon juice.

Cream confectioners' sugar and cornstarch with butter or margarine in top part of double boiler. Separate eggs, beat yolks and stir into creamed mixture. Cook over simmering water, stirring constantly until thickened. Remove from heat and stir in lemon juice. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into sauce. Serve warm over pudding. Yield: 2 cups.

MINIATURE "JULETOMTENS" — adorn this festive table. In Sweden "Juletomtens" arrive just after Christmas dinner, bearing gifts.

Coffee Almondine is a Swedish beverage offered gift bearers. It probably would be a treat for American gift bearers, too.

Welcome gift bearers with Coffee Nog

Remembering the cookies or pies or carrots (for the reindeer, of course) that all of us once set out so lovingly on Christmas Eve, could we ever dismiss the importance of this small token of faith?

After all, wasn't Santa as real then as the sweets and coffee that awaited his touch? Therefore, when Santa slides down the chimneys of North American homes, it's only natural that many of us will want to welcome him with an unusually delicious coffee drink.

Velvet Nog served with nuts, candies and dried fruit stuffed with marshmallow makes tempting morsels for the national successor to that patron of young people, St. Nicholas, and all his helpers. This brandy eggnog starts with double strength coffee, freshly brewed as you would prepare for demitasse using one approved coffee measure to each three ounces of water.

VELVET NOG

2 eggs
½ cup hot milk
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup brandy
1½ cups freshly brewed, double strength coffee
Nutmeg

In blender container place all ingredients. Cover and blend at low speed for 1 minute. Pour into cups and sprinkle with nutmeg. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Not far away in Sweden, a knock on the door just after Christmas dinner signals the long-awaited arrival of "Juletomten". The children hold their breath and their eyes glisten as he stands before them with long, flowing white beard, dressed in his familiar red blouse and trousers.

If he has a few extra minutes after distributing his gifts, he may accept a cup of a special hot brew.

A favorite of both Swedish and American "Juletomtens" is this Coffee Almondine. To make this bracing beverage, brew extra strength coffee using one approved coffee measure to each 4 ounces of water. Be sure to serve immediately after brewing.

COFFEE ALMONDINE

2 cups freshly brewed, extra strength coffee
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ cup brandy
¼ cup slivered toasted almonds
Whipped topping.

In blender container place coffee, sugar, brandy, and almonds. Cover and blend at high speed until almonds are finely chopped about 30 seconds. Pour into demi-tasse cups and top with spoonfuls of whipped topping. Makes 6 servings.

BOOT CADDY

A rimmed cookie sheet makes a good boot caddy to keep inside the front door. Line it with old terrycloth towels, or color-coordinated terry yard goods, to soak up melting show. Easily removable, the liner can be machine laundered as frequently as weather condition

To help rest eyes and erase facial tension lines, wring cotton demands.
pads out of cool water or boric acid solution and place them over the eyes while you soak in the tub.

GINGER SALAD DRESSING

Blend together ½ cup mayonnaise, ½ cup heavy cream that has been whipped, and 1 tablespoon finely chopped crystallized ginger. Chill and serve with pear or other fruit salad. Makes about 1¼ cups.

Kathy Mest honored at birthday party

Kathy Mest was honored at a party in celebration of her 16th birthday given by her mother, Mrs. Lucy Mest, 112 N. Penn St., and relatives at the YWCA.

She is also the daughter of Paul Mest, 238 Lee Ave.

A lighted Christmas tree decorated the stage. Lights entwined in vines trimmed the entire party area.

Centering the table was a cake trimmed with multicolor frosting and pink candles.

Seventy attended.

Chaperones were her mother; sister, Mrs. William Grim; cousin, Mrs. Kenneth Mourning, and two aunts, Mrs. Joseph MacBride and Mrs. Paul Frey.

TOAST ALMONDS

In a large fry pan, toast slivered or sliced almonds, stirring now and then, until barely golden. Store in airtight containers to have handy for holiday baking or to add interest to salads and vegetbles. Toasting accentuates the almond flavor and gives added crunch.

Holiday colors reflected in party snack

It's that time again . . . "chestnuts roasting by the open fire and Jack Frost nipping at your nose" . . . time for carols, and friendly get-togethers. Invite friends to a sing-and-"Souper-Snack" party.

Since food is an indispensable part of hospitality, provide guests with interesting snacks after you've exhausted your repertoire of songs. We suggest "Souper-Snacks" made from canned condensed soups.

One example, Yuletide Green Pea Sip, fits right into the holiday scheme of things. It's colorful with bits of red pimiento and flavorful with butter-browned garlic and oregano.

Along with sipping soup, serve Parmesan Franks in Blankets . . . such delectable appetizers! Cut franks in halves; tuck them into blankets of crescent roll dough seasoned with chopped parsley and Parmesan cheese. Bake until golden brown.

Serve "Souper-Snacks" for every holiday occasion, morning, noon and night, when guests drop in. You'll find plenty of canned condensed soup varieties on the shelf to combine and garnish in dozens of delicious ways.

YULETIDE GREEN PEA SIP

2 small cloves garlic, minced
¼ teaspoon oregano, crushed
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
2 cans (11¼ ounces each) condensed green pea soup
2 soup cans water
¼ cup chopped pimiento

In saucepan, lightly brown garlic with oregano in butter. Add remaining ingredients. Heat; stir now and then. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

QUICK PARTY BALLS

Form balls from equal parts of American blue cheese (crumbled) and prepared pimento cheese sandwich spread. Roll one-half of the balls in parsley, others in dark rye crumbs. Insert toothpicks. To vary, use chive spread in place of pimento cheese spread.

HEARTY REFRESHMENTS — are welcome following a spirited carol-sing. Mugs of green pea soup with flecks of pimiento carry out traditional Yuletide colors.

Sheinwold on bridge

Defend yourself

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

In a certain kind of bridge hand you don't have to worry about the opponent who plays by the book. If your opponent is nasty enough to think for himself, however, you may have to do an equal amount of thinking. You must start by wondering why your opponent has left the beaten track.

Opening lead — ♣ 6

When today's hand was played in a Chicago tournament some years ago, most players opened a heart from the West hand. South duly lost two trumps and one heart, and went on to the next hand without breathing hard.

In a few cases, an experimental West led the six of clubs on the theory that heart tricks could wait. This opening lead usually produced 100 points for East and West.

South usually won with the king of clubs and immediately fired back a trump. West took the king of spades and led his other club. If South then led another trump, West would take the ace of spades and lead a heart, whereupon East would win and lead a third club. West's ruff provided the setting trick.

There is a simple solution to South's problem, but South must first see that there is a problem. Declarer is in no danger if the three missing trumps are normally divided. He cannot save himself if West has led a singleton club and has all of the missing trumps. There is a problem if West has all three trumps, and there is a solution if West has led from a doubleton.

South must lead a heart at the second trick. This gives East the lead before there is any real danger. West is not yet ready to ruff a club.

When West gets in with the king of spades, he cannot get the lead to his partner. South can continue to draw the trumps, after which the rest is easy.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: S- A K 4 H- Q 10 6 3 D- Q 7 8 3 C- 6 4. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. The hand is not quite worth an opening bid. If both red queens were changed to kings, your hand would be worth bidding.

ARTICHOKES

Serve artichokes with a dressing made from olive oil, wine vinegar, salt, pepper, dry mustard and a little dried crumbled thyme. It's the thyme that adds special flavor

Guatemala Nog

- 8 eggs
- 1½ cups sugar
- 6 measuring cups coffee
- 2 cups heavy cream
- 1 pint Kalua, optional

Beat the eggs with the sugar until thick and foamy, and sugar is dissolved, about five minutes. Continue beating while adding the hot coffee. Add cream and stir to blend, or continue to beat if using an electric mixer. Stir in Kalua if desired. Makes about three quarts of punch (if liquor is omitted), 24 four ounce servings. To serve COFFE NOG, pour chilled punch into a large serving bowl and keep it chilled with a coffee ice ring. To make the ice ring, use a three or four cup ring mold. Pour about ¼ inch of clear water into mold and place in freezer until firm. Arrange pieces of fruits, or leaves, pine bows and maraschino cherries in a decorative arrangement over the ice. Carefully add enough additional water to half cover the decorative arrangement and freeze this combination to anchor the decoration. Fill the ring mold with thoroughly cooled coffee and freeze until ready to serve Coffee Nog.

Frock-Altomari marriage solemnized in St. Aloysius

The marriage of Cheryl Ann Altomari and Samuel H. Frock Jr. was solemnized in St. Aloysius Roman Catholic Church with the Rev. Francis X. McKee, assistant rector, officiating.

Arrangements of white flowers adorned the altar for the double ring ceremony. A prelude of organ music was presented by Mrs. Eleanor Kurtz.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guido Altomari, 538 Chestnut St. She was graduated in 1968 from Pottstown High School.

The bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Frock reside at 33 W. 9th St. A graduate of Pottstown High School, with the class of 1966, he is employed in the office of Reading Crane and Hoist Division of Mayer Pollock Steel Corp.

MR. AND MRS. SAMUEL H. FROCK JR.

CAGE GOWN

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a cage gown of white peau de soie with mini bodice of daisy venise lace, jeweled neckline, long sleeves and watteau chapel length train.

Lace petals held her bouffant veil of silk illusion. She wore her great grandmother's diamond chip and gold earrings and carried a nosegay of white carnations.

Mrs. William Levering, Norristown, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Loraine Landis, 329 W. King St., Rosemary Torak, 325 Walnut St., and Linda Bosser, 1026 Park Drive. Susan Altomari was flower girl for her sister.

They were dressed alike in A-line gowns of peach chiffon styled with bishop sleeves, green petal trim at the empire waistline and back panel of chiffon.

Petaled headpieces held their circular face veils. Mrs. Levering carried peach, green and yellow carnations. The bridesmaids bouquets were of peach and green carnations.

GROOMSMEN

Best man was Terry Moulder, 1 W. 9th St. Scott Raugh, 906 Washington St., William Levering, Norristown, and Gary Long, 61 Sweinhart Road, ushered.

Richard Skokowski, 36 W. 9th St., was ring bearer.

Mother of the bride, Mrs. Altomari wore a blue and white dress and corsage of blue tinted carnations. Mrs. Frock chose a tan dress and corsage of yellow carnations for her son's wedding.

After a reception for 75 guests at Maria Assunta Lodge, Mr. and Mrs. Frock left for a honeymoon in the Poconos. They are residing at Pottsgrove Arms. 17 W. Vine St., Stowe.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at their home following the wedding rehearsal. Mrs. Frock and Mrs. Levering, both hosted prenuptial showers for the bride.

APPETIZER

Wrap bacon around pitted plumped prunes; broil several inches from high heat turning as necessary, until the bacon is crisp. Serve with a cheese spread and crackers as a snack offering at a party.

RICH DOUGH

When you are making turnovers or tarts with a very rich pastry dough, roll out only half the dough at a time and shape. Keep the dough you are not working with chilled in the refrigerator. Use this technique also for rich cookie dough.

LIGHT GARDEN TIP

Be sure that the tops of all your house plants grown under artificial light are the same distance from the light source. You can put them on inverted clay pots to raise heights of low-growing plants.

CLEANING EASE

Electric fry pans are designed with different features to fit varying needs. One universal need is ease of cleaning. This is best answered by those pans that can be safely immersed in hot suds.

'Potpourri' is novel calling card

Leave a clever — and edible — calling card behind when you pay Christmas visits this year. Your "Holiday Potpourri" gift is a tangy blend of cheeses and spices, which you quick - mix yourself.

Pack your cheese spread in colorful "crocks" — which you can decorate using plastic containers (such as those in which cottage cheese, ice cream, or process cheese spreads are sold).

Crocks can be covered with stick-on paper or regular Christmas paper attached with rubber cement or tape. For a freely opening lid: be sure to tuck the upper edge of the cover fabric up under the "lip" of the container.

On lid exterior, cover only the product label, leaving lid sides unencumbered. Decorate with Christmas notions.

For a usable handle, loop ribbon under container (before covering) then tie in a bow on top. Or, simply stripe your container with bright holiday packaging tapes.

HOLIDAY POTPOURRI: Mix together one part American blue cheese, crumbled, to three parts grated cheddar. For each cup of cheese used, add any or all of these ingredients: a dash of salt; ¼ tsp. each of dry mustard and Worchestershire sauce; and 1 tsp. each of butter, minced onion, and cracked pepper (optional). Slowly blend in buttermilk until mixture reaches the consistency of soft cheese spreads.

SPREAD CHEER — with holiday cheese. Disguished by Christmas wrappings, household plastic containers —now used for storing leftovers—can assume a more noble identity, that of holiday gift container.

tempted to gain more time for his client with a letter to the board's solicitor, saying the West End Firehall was not available on the rescheduled date, and it may be after the first of the yar before the controversy is settled.

Matthew Santangelo, Pottstown lawyer and solicitor for the commissioners, questioned why the hearing had to be in the firehall when there are several other places available more suitable for t h e judicial atmosphere.

Santangelo in a written statement to Fitzgeradl said the board would meet "anytime and place on either Dec. 12 or 18."

Santangelo, o f f e r i n g two suggestions to the board in his attempt to solve the situation at the earliest time, said they could request an independent master be appointed by the courts to hear the Mays' case, since there has been this dispute as to the date and site.

His second suggestion was to permit Mays to be reactivated for minimum duty to give the township adequate protection because they are not free to seek a full-time replacement until the case is settled.

LONG ENOUGH

..The board agreed they have held off long enough and want the hearing before the end of the year enabling the new commissioners to start on a clean slate.

It was unanimously decided that Mays would be given a choice of the two dates mentioned in Santangelo's letter and would allow the former chief to choose the location.

If he refuses, tries to postpone or doesn't show up, according to the Pottstown lawyer, the case will hang suspended.

In other action, James Harbach, chairman of the police committee, reported two new part-time patrolmen have been hired and sworn in.

The new patrolmen, John Dickenson, South Pottstown and Robert Johnson, 202 Reynolds Ave., bring the township police force to four part-time members. John Paretti's resignation was accepted by the board.

B o a r d President, Angelo Palladino, complimented board members Joseph Madaras and James Harbach on their work since joining the board. This was the last meeting for both.

Palladino also expressed his gratitude to Albert J. Basile for the job he has done while serving as tax collector for the township.

Fire Damages Boy's Bedroom In Royersford

A Royersford family was routed from its home Wednesday by a fire that destroyed the furnishings in the bedroom to which the blaze was confined.

The fire broke out at 5:15 p.m. in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moyer, 401 N. Fifth Ave., and all three fire companies in the Twin Boroughs responded. They are the Humane and Friendship Cos., Royersford, and the Liberty Co., Spring City.

One of the Moyers' sons told Fire Capt. William Umstead sparks flew from a lamp in his bedroom after he turned it on. They ignited bedding, and flames spread to everything else in the room, the fire official said.

No estimate of damage was available. Firemen remained at the scene for an hour and a half. The family was able to return.

Rotary Hears Chief Tracy Of Pottstown

Pottstown Police Chief Richard J. Tracy Wednesday told the Spring City-Royersford Rotary Club that police enforcement in this country is only as effective as the individual citizen permits it to be.

In too many cases, he told his audience, the person who loudly champions the cause of law and order actually employs a double standard when a personal relationship with the law becomes involved.

The policeman cannot employ a double standard, he said, and the individual citizen should consider this when the law comes to bear in his particular circumstances. Too often is law and order undermined by an otherwise responsible citizen who speaks derogatorily about a policeman, or policemen, before a young person, he added.

Chief Tracy outlined ways in which individual citizens can assist in the lessening of crime, stressing that a person should not make his home or car a target for criminal intent. He pointed out that the vast majority of criminal cases involves not hardened criminals, but rather persons who are tempted into criminal acts only because an opportunity is presented to him or her. He pointed out as an example the common practice of leaving the car ignition key in tact.

The meeting was held at the Spring-Ford Country Club. The speaker was introduced by William S. Peifer program chairman.

Limerick School Pupils Present Program Before Spring-Ford Golden Age Club

Seventy-two sixth grade pupils of Limerick Elementary School, Limerick Township, presented a program of Christmas songs and carols after the Spring-Ford Golden Age Club, Monday in the American Legion Home, Main Street, Royersford.

Mrs. Uselene McCamley, music teacher, directed the presentation, assisted with costumes and props by Judith Stryker, also a member of the faculty. Several children sang solos in the selection, "The Twelve Days of Christmas."

Singing parts of the three wise men were Dennis Hill, David Miller and Jim Weikel. Homemade cookies and beverage were served.

The group at its business session agreed to contribute $10 to The Mercury's Bundles for buddies. The Rev. George Tovey, Murl Tiffany and Mrs. Kate McClellan were named to the nominating committee. The slate will be presented at next Monday's meeting, when officers will be elected.

Sixty members attended the session, which opened with prayer by Lee Roy Bruckensong and a flag ceremony followed.

A club member, Harry F. Weber, Spring City, was reported recuperating at home following a stay in the hospital. The annual Christmas banquet will be Dec. 22 at Liberty firehall, South Main and Hall streets, Spring City.

Transportation was provided by Mrs. Dan Ortolani. Commodore Rarich, Mrs. Eva Yerk, George Elliott, Jess Wilson, William Grissom, Mrs. John Fridy, Paul Baum, and George W. Lee, president.

Slavery was abolished on Guadeloupe, an island in the French West Indies, in 1794.

10 things America's new small cars won't talk about.

Nova talks about things those new little cars prefer not to mention.
For instance, (1) a cargo-guard luggage compartment; (2) an extra set of fenders inside the fenders; (3) flush and dry rocker panels that help prevent rust and corrosion; (4) a quality built Body by Fisher; (5) Magic-Mirror acrylic lacquer finish; (6) a firm, steady ride programmed by computer-selected springs; (7) six different engines and five transmissions available; (8) an available lighting group that even includes a monitor for your windshield washer fluid; (9) radios you can order, with antennas built right into the windshield and (10) the availability of a new, more compact radio/stereo tape system. America's little cars don't offer them. Nova does.
Nova also has a very appealing price. And a lot of loyal friends.
Wonder why.

Putting you first, keeps us first.

Students Shun Food In Biafra Protest

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Nearly 500 Aquinas College students went without food, including the college's pre-Christmas holiday dinner, Tuesday as an expression of sympathy for residents of war-torn Biafra.

Saga Foods Service, which operates campus dining facilities, said it would turn over the $350-$450 saved on food costs to an Aquinas alumnus in Biafra who wants to set up two relief units.

Trojans Stop Wildcats

Pottstown High's lightweights did just what Trojan Coach Lee Bohner was hoping they would do, but not even Bohner expected his first three matmen to come through as brilliantly as they did Wednesday.

Amir Ecker, Vern Ingham and Dan Staverosky, Pottstown's wrestlers at 95, 103 and 112 pounds respectively all won by pins Wednesday night to give the Trojans a huge 16-0 lead, a lead which Owen J. Roberts could not overcome.

The Trojans whipped the Wildcats 27-22 on the Pottstown mats. The win over Owen J. was the third in the last four seasons for Bohner and was especially pleasing for the Trojan Coach since his forces fell to the Wildcats last year on a controversial final bout.

"Even though I expected us to win in the lightweights," said Bohner, "I didn't expect our lightweights all to win on pins."

But Ecker, Ingham and Staverosky did just that. After scoring two points on a takedown, Ecker pinned Wildcat Jay Rightnour at 1:51 of the first period with a three-quarter nelson.

At 103 pounds, Ingham built up a 7-0 edge before he ended the match in the second period by pinning Mike Freese at 3:41. Ingham used a chicken wing and half nelson for the pin.

Staverosky scored the third pin after dominating the match 13-0 until he pinned Rich MacNeill early in the fourth period. Pinning at 4:55, Staversoky used a double chicken wing.

The Wildcats got their first points when their 120-pounder, Todd Malenke, decisioned Rusty Oister 10-4, but Pottstown's Reggie Aiken won the next match at 127 pounds to get back the lost points and put Pottstown out front 19-3. Aiken defeated Rich Powell by a 6-2 count, scoring on a predicament, a penalty point, a reversal and one point riding time.

But the Wildcats then won the next four matches in a row to pull within two points of the Trojans 19-17. Dave McClimon stopped Jeff Pittinger 4-2 after Pittinger had taken a 2-0 lead into the final period of the 133-pound match.

At 138 and 145, Owen J.'s two strongest wrestlers made short work of their Trojin opponents. At 138 pounds, Ralph Reish disposed of Rich Smith by pinning the Trojan with 2:48 having gone in the match. Reish held a 7-0 lead at the time he pinned Smith. Don Kulp followed his teammate with a victory by decisioning Bob Stouch 10-0.

Schwoyer, at 165 pounds, had little trouble in decisioning Bruce Denithorne 8-0.

ROBERTS RALLY — Pottstown 145-pounder Bob Stouch is on the bottom in this shot, but the Trojans had a 19-11 edge at this point in the match. Don Kulp, Stouch's opponent, stopped the Trojan matman 10-0 and cut three more points from the Pottstown lead. The Trojans prevailed, however, beat the Wildcats 27-22 in the Ches-Mont League opener for the squads at Pottstown High. (Mercury Staff Photo).

Falcons Tie Coatesville; Bears, Spring-Ford Fall

Heavyweight Bob Sherman pinned his Coatesville opponent in 3:21 Wednesday night to give his Pottsgrove High team a 23-23 tie with the visiting Red Raiders. The tie ended a long losing streak for the Falcons which saw them go without a Ches-Mont League victory last season.

Sherman's opponent, Earl Anderson, took a 2-0 lead with a takedown in the first period, but Sherman tied the score early in the second period with a reversal. Anderson came back with a reversal, but Sherman then pulled his second reversal of the period and knotted the score at 4-4. Soon afterwards Sherman pinned Anderson with a cradle.

Another key match for the Falcons was the 165 pound bout where Pottsgrove's Tim Moses drew with the Red Raiders' tough Steve DiObilda. DiObilda built a 6-3 lead in the first period with a takedown, a reversal and two points riding time. In the second period, Moses got a reversal to cut the margin to 6-5, but DiObilda escaped for another point. Moses, however, was awarded two points riding time at the close of the match to make the score 7-7.

In other area matches, Phoenixville defeated Boyertown 27-18, Downingtown stopped Spring-Ford 26-17, Great Valley beat West Chester 23-17 and Daniel Boone slammed Elco 38-11.

In the Bears' battle with the Phantoms, Roy Cubbler's Boyertown forces held the lead all the way up till the 154 pound bout when Barry Johnson decisioned Boyertown's Bob Myers to give Phoenixville the lead for the first time in the match 17-15. Phoenixville's Jim Fordbey then came up with a pin on Mike Freedman to put the Phantoms out front 22-15. Boyertown's 180 pound man, Bob Cornad, took a 10-6 decision over Ike Brown, but Bear heavyweight Steve Heintz was pinned early in the second period.

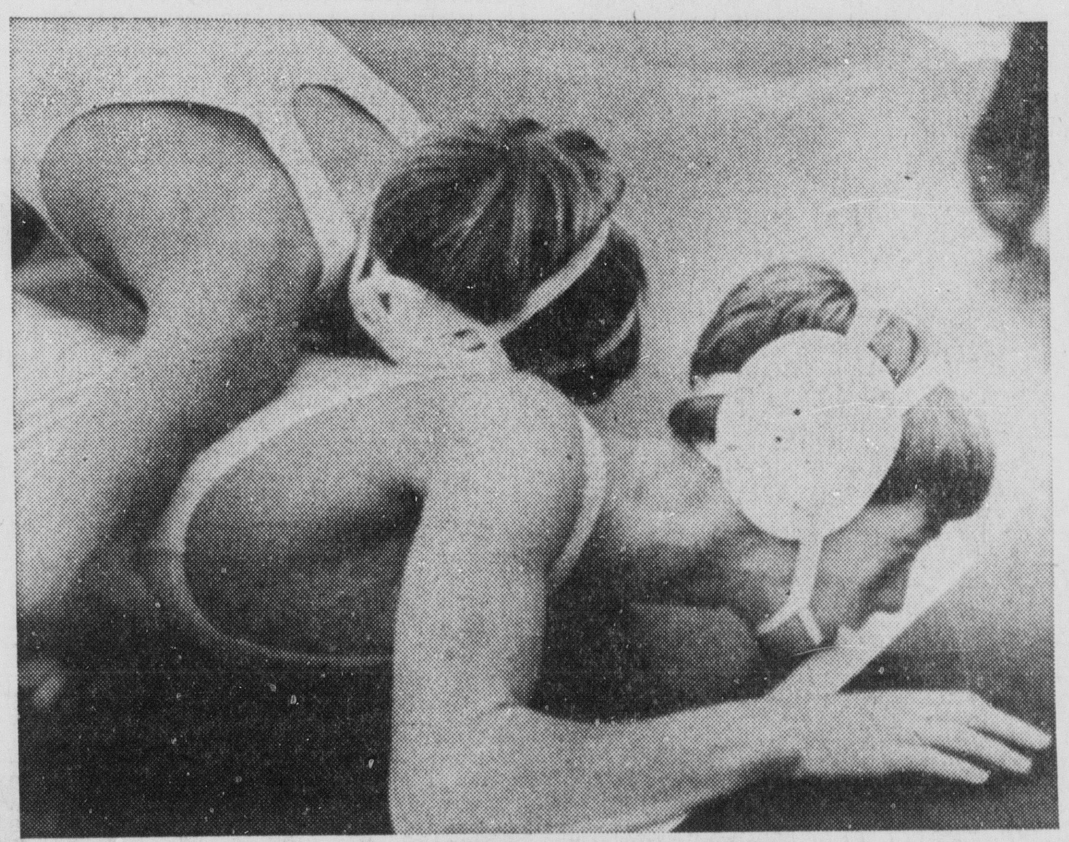
Green's Steal Beats 76ers For Royals

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Royals downed the Philadelphia 76ers, Wednesday night 122-121 when Johnny Green stole the ball and put the Royals out front with 37 seconds to play in a National Basketball Association game.

Oscar Robertson, leading both teams with 35 points, kept the Royals in contention throughout.

Fred Foster came off the bench in the second period to score 15 points to put the Royals ahead 63-60 at midpoint. Billy Cunningham, with 34 points, put the 76ers out front again in the third and fourth periods. Hal Greer had 29 points for Philadelphia.



THE ONLY WAY TO BEGIN — Amir Ecker, Pottstown High's 95-pounder, is shown on top here in his opening bout with Owen J. Roberts' Jay Rightnour. Ecker ultimately pinned Rightnour to give the Trojans a 6-0 lead, a lead they never relinquished as Pottstown stopped Roberts 27-22 Wednesday night in the Ches-Mont League opener for both teams at Pottstown. Silknitter, Bauer, Pace Cats' Win

Rich Bauer and John Silknitter tallied 18 of Owen J. Roberts High's 22 first period points Wednesday night again Unionville as the Wildcats built a lead they were never to relinquish. The Wildcats evened their record at 2-2 with a 65-60 triumph on the losers' court.

Bauer, the game's high scorer with 23 markers, tallied eight of his points in the opening period, while Silknitter got 10 of his 17 markers in the first frame. The Bauer-Silknitter punch gave the Wildcats a 22-12 edge at the start of the second period.

"They had us 12-11 at one point in the first period," Owen J. Coach John Murphy recalled, "but we scored 11 straight points."

The Wildcats extended their lead to as many as 17 points 55-38 in the third quarter when Bauer scored 10 more points, but the home team narrowed the lead to 14 by the end of the quarter and then closed in near the end of the game.

As in Owen J.'s victory over Perkiomen Valley Monday night, Tom Wanner was again the Wildcats' leading rebounder with nine rebounds, while Waverly Hatcher was close behind with eight. But the losers had the overall edge in rebounding 39-35. Unionville won the junior varsity game 38-31.

A FOOTBALL FAMILY

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — The Pikes of Harrisonburg, Va., have had a very busy football season trying to keep up with three sons.

One September weekend they saw their son Henry play a high school game on a Friday night. They then traveled 600 miles to Boston to see Dan, Navy's co-captain, play against Boston College and that night went to New London to see Charlie play for the Coast Guard Academy against Wayne State.

WON WHEN IT COUNTED

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — South Carolina scored only five points more than it allowed during a 7-3 season but the Gamecocks won all six Atlantic Coast Conference games and the championship.

South Carolina scored 186 points and allowed 181. The team lost non-league games to Georgia, Florida State and Tennessee.

Clay-Frazier Bout Disputed

MIAMI (AP) — Boxing Merchants shook hands Wednesday on a Cassius Clay-Joe Frazier heavyweight title fight at Tampa Stadium, but a Miami bidder yelled double cross and promised to take the case to court "because the deal was mine."

Bob Arum, an attorney for Clay said the Miami negotiations were halted without an agreement and that the 48,000-seat football arena in Tampa would host the match Feb. 16 or 17.

"Contracts will be signed by the weekend," said Arum. "Clay and Frazier are guaranteed $300,000 apiece, but stand to earn well over $1 million each thanks to closed-circuit television."

In New York, Clay denied a report that he said he would only fight Frazier in Miami and not in Tampa.

"It don't matter to me where the fight is as long as it's legal," said Clay also known as Muhammad Ali. "My people are down there in Tampa negotiating the fight and I want to get on with it and get everything settled.

"I want to get at that Joe Frazier. It's a disgrace to have three champions. I want to get Frazier out of the way. I want to prove who the real champion is."

Clay said "I'm 30 pounds overweight and out of shape. I will only have about six weeks to work in camp and get in shape but everyone tells me that the February date is the best time for down there. So I'm going to gamble and do the very best I can."

In Philadelphia, Yank Durham, Frazier's manager, said if Clays want to fight it it would have to be in Tampa. He had been told of the report, which Clay denied. Later Durham said he spoke to Clay and Durham said Clays wants to back down.

When Clay was informed of this, he said "there's nothing to it. I want to fight him in Tampa and he better show up after all that talking he's been doing."

The Miami promoter, Murry Woroner, said his attorney came to an agreement with Clay's lawyer in New York 48 hours before. "Everything was settled and a rough contract drawn up," said Irving Whitman, legal counsel for Woroner. "Arum's people were to mail me the contracts--signed by Clay and Frazier--on Tuesday.'

Woroner waved a telegram from Bruce Wright, an attorney representing Frazier, that said negotiations were off. The Miami promoter said the wire came Tuesday night.

"If Frazier doesn't fight Clay in Miami, he won't fight anybody anywhere," Worner said. Whitman added, "nothing was signed, but our verbal deal will stand up in court, in my opinion."

When informed of Worner's plans, Arum broke into laughter. "Murry is acting like a child," he said. "Anybody can bring a suit in America, but it won't hold water this time. And it's not about to delay the Tampa match."

Worner's offer of $300,000 per man in guarantees matched the Tampa figures, Arum said. "But we would have had no live gate to speak of in Miami and the fighters are receiving better percentages, which is what will count when the money totals roll into the millions."

The South Florida plan was unique and the proposal was to hold the Clay-Frazier battle inside a television studio. It was once a Baptist church, but has been converted for filming.

"Our live audience would have been about 200 persons," Woroner said. "The gate was to be from closed-circuit television in total. Those actually in the studio for the bout would pay $2,000 a head with the money going to two charities, the Leukemia Foundation and the Society for Black Studies."

Woroner's percentage deal for the boxers was 25 per cent of the gross.

"Murry was taking advantage of the fighters," claimed Arum, who met with the Tampa principals Wednesday. "The folks in Tampa made a lot more sense."

Arum, a partner in the New York firm of attorney-author Louis Nizer, said details such as Tampa Stadium ticket prices have not been agreed upon, "but it will produce much more income for the fighters than a handful inside a TV studio."

Sports Action, Inc., will produce the Tampa bout and Arum said, "the audience should be the largest in history. Thanks to three communications satellites that are now working, we can reach all of South America and much of Europe."

Arum credited Florida Gov. Claude Kirk for being the moving force in landing a Clay-Frazier match. "He had the guts to give it a stamp of approval," said the attorney, "and then we received nods from at least six states that claimed the fight was suddenly cleared for their areas."

Chiefs Hope to Turn Tide In Division Title Contest

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs hope to even history out a bit Saturday when they meet Oakland in a pivotal game which decides the American Football League's Western Division title.

In the last eight outings against Oakland, the Chiefs have been turned back six times. The Chiefs, by taking a win this time, would balance that record and establish a season of 12 wins and two losses. A loss for Oakland would knock them out of first place in the division and give them 11 wins, 2 losses and 1 tie.

The Raiders, in order to protect their lead, need a tie or a victory. But the Chiefs must win outright.

Of the two victories the Chiefs have claimed over the Raiders, one was a 32-1 verdict at the opening of Oakland's new stadium in September, 1966, and the other was a 24-10 conquest at Kansas City, where Coach Hank Stram's daring full-house-T minimized Oakland's strength.

In one of the most unusual games between the two clubs, the Chiefs had 60 rushing plays and threw a pro record low of three passes. They won by controlling the ball and minimizing the potent Raider passing attack.

The Chiefs and Oakland have been meeting since 1966. And in that period, Oakland has dropped the Kansas City quarterbacks 23 times for 199 yards and has grabbed off 16 interceptions.

Lamonica, Tyrer Head AFL All-Star Selections

NEW YORK (AP)—The Oakland Raiders and Kansas City Chiefs, who meet Saturday in a Western Division showdown, landed 12 spots on the American Football League's 1969 All-Star squad named Wednesday by The Associated Pres.

Quarterback Daryle Lamonica led a contingent of seven Raiders and offensive tackle Jim Tyrer, top vote-getter on the 22-man squad, was among five Chiefs selected by a panel of sports writers and sportscasters -- three from each AFL city.

Lamonica, wide reciever Fred Biletnikoff, tackle Harry Schuh, guard Gene Upshaw and center Jim Otto were the Oakland players named to the offensive unit. Cornerback Willie Brown and safety Dave Grayson gave the Raiders two defensive berths.

Kansas City's representatives, in addition to the 6-foot-6, 275-pound Tyrer, were offensive guard Ed Budde and three defenders--tackle Buck Buchanan, corner linebacker Bobby Bell and safety Johnny Robinson. Tyrer, who received 27 of a possible 30 votes, Bell and Robinson have been first team picks for five straight seasons.

Topped by the Oakland-Kansas City group, the West had a 15-7 edge over the Eastern Division clubs in representation. New York's defending AFL champs accounted for four of the East's nominees--running back Matt Snell, wide receiver Don Maynard, defensive end Gerry Philbin and defensive tackle John Elliott.

Tight end Bob Trumpy of Cincinnati and running back Floyd Little of Denver completed the offensive alignment. End Rich Jackson, Denver's ferocious pass-rusher, corner linebacker George Webster of Houston, middle linebacker Nick Buoniconti of Miami and cornerback Butch Byrd of Buffalo filled out the defensive team.

Boston and San Diego were the only clubs without a first team selection.

Lamonica, whose 33 touchdown passes are three short of the all-time pro season record, nailed the quarterback spot with 20 votes. Joe Namath of the Jets, last year's choice, got the other 10.

Other big winners were Bell and Brown, with 24 votes each, and Trumpy, Jackson, Elliott and Grayson, with 23 apiece.

The closest contests saw Maynard edge San Diego's Lance Alworth by three votes for a wide receiver berth, Schuh beat out New York's Winston Hill by two at offensive tackle, and Buoniconti reclaimed the middle linebacker post by two over Oakland's Dan Conners and four over Kansas City's Willie Lanier.

The repeaters from last year's All-Star team, in addition to Tyrer, Bell and Robinson, were Upshaw and Otto on offense; Jackson, Philbin, Buchanan, Webster, Brown and Grayson on defense.

It was Otto's ninth first-team selection in his 10 years with the Raiders.

HANNUM TAKES ROCKETS' REINS — Alex Hannum (right), new coach of the San Diego Rockets, accepts congratulations Wednesday from Rocket general manager Pete Newell. Hannum was hired to replace Jack McMahon who was fired Tuesday as coach of the National Basketball Association team. (AP Wirephoto).

Former 76er Head Coach

Hannum Hired to Fuel Rockets

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Alex Hannum, the only coach to beat the Boston Celtics for the National Basketball Association title in more than a decade, was hired Wednesday to fire up the slumping San Diego Rockets.

Hannum, 46, succeeded easy-going Jack McMahon, who was fired Tuesday. General Manager Pete Newell announced the hiring of Hannum, an 11-year veteran of NBA coaching.

The Rockets won only nine of their first 26 games under McMahon, the only coach in their three-year history.

McMaron, 41, was dean of present day coaches in his eighth year in the NBA. But players called him "too nice."

Said one: "We need a coach who will put his foot down and Hannum is a tough cookie. He won't take any guff."

The Associated Press predicted the naming of Hannum a day before the announcement.

Although the Rockets are mired in sixth place in the NBA's western division, Hannum said he sees "no reason why this team, with breaks and help, can't climb in the standings. One of our immediate goals is to get ourselves into the playoffs."

Hannum said he would handle players "with authority."

"I like to get along with people, particularly the men you have to live with seven months out of the year, but someone has to be the boss. To take a position of authority, you must command that position."

Players on opposing teams have said the Rockets haven't been winning because they play as individuals.

"We must work together to achieve what we want to do and that is to win," Hannum said.

His teams in the NBA from 1956 to 1968 won 413 and lost 332. He coached the St. Louis Hawks when they defeated Boston for the championship in 1958, and his Philadelphia 76ers, with Wilt Chamberlain, whipped the Celtics in 1967.

Hannum also coached at Syracuse and San Francisco and disclosed that he sought the San Diego job when the NBA expanded because he wanted to live on the West Coast. He has a construction business in his native Los Angeles.

He had been out of basketball since quitting as coach of the Oakland Oaks of the American Basketball Association when the franchise was moved to Washington, D.C. for this season. He led the Oaks to the ABA title in 1968-69.

Hannum said he had a "loose contract" with the Rockets: "I haven't signed any papers yet but the basic agreement is that I will be here the rest of this season and next year."

Hannum said he hated to replace "my very good friend," McMahon, but when Newell contacted him Monday night "I was so excited I didn't sleep the rest of the night. That's how anxious I was."

McMahon, who coached the Rockets into the NBA playoffs last season, had a record of 61-129 with the team. His one-year contract expires in July. "I may stay here and look into business opportunities," he said.

Yale Censured by ECAC

NEW YORK (AP) — The Eastern College Athletic Conference censured Yale University Wednesday for using an ineligible basketball player in violation of an ECAC ruling and threatened to take the matter before the conference membership "for consideration of possible further penalty."

In New Haven, Conn., a Yale spokesman said the player in question, 6-foot-8 Jack Langer of Fort Lee, N.J., was on the team bus en route to Wednesday night's Ivy Lague game against Brown in Providence, R.I., and was expected to see action.

The ECAC constitution states that "should a college member violate any of the terms" of ECAC membership, "it may be expelled from membership in the conference." Such action would require a two-thirds vote of all members present at an annual or special meeting and at least a majority vote of the entire membership.

With 190 member colleges, the ECAC is the nation's largest athletic conference.

The Yale spokesman said he expected the matter to go to an ECAC membership meeting.

Langer was declared ineligible by the ECAC last Sept. 22 for playing with the United States team in the Maccabiah Games in Israel last August.

Langer and Yale were notified by the ECAc, an affiliate of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, of its rules against off-season organized basketball without NCAA sanction.

The NCAA has permitted exceptions for the Olympic and Pan-American Games, previous Maccabiah Games, and certain other cases. But this year, after another battle with the Amateur Athletic Union, which is the official U.S. representative in world amateur basketball, the NCAA refused sanctions for collegians to play in the Maccabiah Games, the Jewish Olympics.

"Our position was if the boy wanted to go, Yale wanted him to go," said DeLaney Kiphuth, Yale's director of athletics. "Jack wanted to go so badly he could hardly see, and we said he could go. In our thoughts, it was the chance of a life time for the boy. These games rank very much higher than the Pan-American games and equal to or just below the Olympic Games. There's a religious angle, too.

"I notified the Yale governing board and Yale President Kingman Brewster Jr. of our position and both approved Langer's participation in the Games. "We are not looking for a fight with the ECAC and we are not backing away. Langer is free to play with our backing. It is up to Coach Joe Vancisin how much he will play in each game."

Yale has an 0-2 record, with Langer scoring 18 points against Fordham and nine against Connecticut. He was the only collegian to represent the U.S. in Maccabiah basketball. Seven others withdrew after the ECAC ruling. In a telegram to Yale, signed by Commissioner Asa S. Bushnell, the ECAC said:

"The executive council of the ECAC supports the Sept. 22 action of the EAC committee on eligibility in decreeing ineligibility for Jack Langer and further censures Yale for its use in intercollegiate competition of this ineligible player.

"The executive council directs that Yale immediately cease and desist in such use of an ineligible player. If Yale declines to comply with this directive, the executive council shall refer the matter to the conference membership for consideration of possible further penalty."

Minnesota Linebacker Chosen Player of Week

NEW YORK (AP) — When the Minnesota Vikings broke the Los Angeles Rams' 11-game winning streak Sunday, the man in the middle was old No. 59 Lonnie Warwick, the middle linebacker of the Vikings.

"I am sure both the Vikings and Rams went into the game with similar game plans," said Minnesota coach Bud Grant. "We established our running game. They did not, primarily because of the way our linebackers handled their jobs."

The Rams ran the ball 22 times and gained only 61 yards, most of that to the outside, while the Vikings ran for 177 yards and rolled to a 20-13 victory.

"It was Warwick's finest game ever" said Grant. "He did a great job sealing up the middle."

Warwick, a 6-foot-3 product of Tennessee Tech who was signed as a free agent in 1964, wasn't too agile last year at 256 pounds. Coach Grant, upset because none of his linebackers intercepted a pass all during the 21-game 1968 season including exhibitions and post season games, ordered Warwick to take off a few pounds. He trained down to 230 and now plays at about 232 pounds. Quicker at his new weight, Warwick has also intercepted four passes.

Warwick clogged up the middle against the Rams and shook up the Los Angeles ball carriers with his crunching tackles to earn the Associated Press' nomination as Defensive Player of the Week in the National Football League.

Fran Tarkenton, New York Giants' quarterback who threw four touchdown passes in a 49-6 route of St. Louis, was named the offensive player earlier this week.

Atlanta's Don Hansen, who is manfully trying to fill the shoes of injured Tommy Nobis as middle linebacker, also earned a nomination for his efforts in the Falcons' 45-17 victory over New Orleans. Hansen made three big plays in a row. He intercepted a pass and returned 40 yards to the Saints' 12 to set up a touchdown. He dropped a Saints' runner for a loss and then intercepted another pass and ran it back 11 to set up a field goal. He was credited with eight tackles.

Bob Lurtsema, a recent tenant of coach Alex Webster's dog house, led the New York Giants' defensive line in four sacks of the St. Louis quarterbacks.

Ernie Kellerman ran 40 yards for a touchdown after intercepting a pass in Cleveland's 20-7 triumph over Green Bay. It was the fourth score by a Cleveland defender this season and gave the Browns a 20-0 lead in the third quarter.

Roosevelt Taylor blocked two field goal attempts by Chicago's Mac Percival in a Saturday game won by the San Francisco 49ers, 42-21.

Penn State's Reid Maxwell's Top Man

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — All-America tackle Mike Reid of Penn State has been named the Maxwell Club choice as the No. 1 college football player of 1969, it was announced Wednesday.

In addition to disclosing its choice for college football player of the year, the Maxwell Club also disclosed it had selected Roman Gabriel, quarterback of the Los Angeles Rams as the outstanding pro of 1969.

Reid and Gabriel will be honored by the club at its annual dinner here Jan. 19.

Reid, a native of Altoona, Pa., is a 6-foot-3 lineman described by his coach, Joe Paterno, as the best defensive tackle in the country. He is a music major and accomplished pianist who has been invited to play with the Utah Symphony Orchestra.

The 33rd recipient of the Maxwell college award, Reid, a 22-year-old senior, is piling up honors. He has been chosen the nation's outstanding interior lineman by the football writers, lineman of the year by the Washington Touchdown Club and major college player of the year by the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference. Reid was fifth in the voting for the Heisman Trophy, most votes for any lineman.

Gabriel, a 6-foot-4, 220 pound passer, currently leads the National Football League in touchdown passes with 23. He has completed 197 of 362 passes while leading the Rams to the NFL's Coastal Division title. The Rams will meet the Minnesota Vikings for the Western championship and the right to play the Eastern winner for the NFL championship.

1st Draftee Recalls Zero Bonus

NEW YORK (AP)"My timing was bad—in being born," Jay Berwanger, the University of Chicago's one man gang of another era, lamented Wednesday in recalling his historic role as the first man ever drafted in pro football.

"You know how much bonus they offered me?" the still solid, graying hero of the mid-1930s added. "Exactly nothing.

"I said to heck with it and took a $25 a week job with a rubber company. No, I never regretted not going into pro football--not at those prices."

Berwanger was one of the football Hall of Famers honored her Tuesday night by the National Football Foundation, which also presented its prestigious Gold Medal Award to President Nixon.

The former Dubuque, Iowa, athlete, whose name in his day was more magnetic than those of Joe Namath and O.J. Simpson today, spoke blithely of his historic role as the first Heisman Trophy winner and the No. 1 pick in pro football's first draft in 1936.

"I completed my career in 1935," he recalled. "I was drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles, who immediately sold their rights to me to the Chicago Bears.

"My negotations with George Halas made no headway whatever. All I asked was $12,500 a year for two years, which seemed reasonable enough. You would have thought I was asking for the First National Bank, plus his arm and leg. He turned me down flat.

"Salaries weren't much in those days anyhow. Bronko Nagurski was the biggest name in pro football. He was making $7,000 a year."

Berwanger admitted that he sometimes experiences deep pangs of what-might-have-been when reading of astronomical bonuses and salaries demanded by modern stars.

Namath's sigring package was reported to be $450,000. Jim Grabowski and Donny Anderson were said to have cost the Green Bay Packers more than $1 million. O.J. Simpson, now with the Buffalo Bills, has a four-year football contract figure of about $300,000.

"If I could have just been born 30 years later," sighed Berwanger.

"It's true," agreed Charley Conerly, another Hall of Famer who was quarterback star of the Giants in the 1950s. "I got $75,000 for five years and I thought it was Fort Knox."

Berwanger played in the era of one platoon football--his varsity years were 1933, 1934 and 1935--and the game probably has never produced a more rugged all-around craftsman.

A six-foot 195-pounder, he ran for 1,839 yards, averaging 4.19 yards a carry; he passed for 921 yards and caught passes for 189. He captained the team, called signals, punted, kicked off, played safety, returned kickoffs and served as line-backer.

Playing both ways, on both offense and defense, he was the equivalent of Namath, Simpson and the Vikings' Front Four. Playing on a team where football was deemphasized and later dropped, and where his mates were of little more than high school caliber, he defeated powerful Big Ten teams almost single-handedly.

In a game against Illinois, he once carried the ball twice as far as the entire Illini backfield. In the first half against Minnesota in 1934, he made 14 tackles.

Now a lean 185 pounds, Berwanger is owner of his own business in Chicago, father of three grown children and a football TV buff--only half sorry his career took another turn.

FIS Prohibits Network From Showing Ski Films

By GEOFFREY ATKINS
Associated Press Writer

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) — The International Ski Federation stepped into a cash row between the United States Ski Association and ABC television Wednesday by barring the American network from show film of the U.S. team's racing in Europe.

Marc Hodler, Swiss president of the FIS, sent a telegram to the Val d'Isere organizers warnings them that the resort risks sanctions if ABC film of the races is shown in the United States. The U. S. team chiefs have rejected an offer of $15,000 from the network to film the U.S. girls and boys in all European races during this world championship season. The National Ski Association reportedly is demanding $65,000. The first race, which was not in the proposed TV package, was staged Wednesday with Francoise Macchi, 13, winning the giant slalom in 1 minutes, 49.81 seconds. Barbara Cochran, 18, of Richmond, Vt., finished second in 1:50.55 with Micehele Jacot of France third in 1:50.79. Americans made a good showing in the first event of the World Cup competition. Marilyn Cochran, Barbara's older sister, was seventh, Karen Budge of Jackson, Wyo., ninth and Juli Wolcottrof Undergill Center, Vt., 13th. The men's giant slalom is scheduled Thursday.

Donald Henderson, chief men's coach, said, "We will be racing Thursday because Mr. Hodler has instructed the organizers to ban ABC from the race."

But former U.S. team chief, Bob Beattie, now an ABC consultant, commented: "I've been in touch with Hodler. We are not banned from filming, just from showing the film on television in America while the dispute is on."

Beattie said ABC consulted Hodler who advised that it would not be necessary to pay the U.S. Ski Association, as well as the sponsors of the race.

Informed sources said the U.S. Association is demanding $65,000 for the rights of the U.S. teams in the European races. Beattie said the $15,000 is considered a donation by ABC. Hodler himself was slated to arrive here Sunday.

Beattie said: "Those of us with ABC sports here in Val d'Isere are standing by ready to bring the U.S. ski team story to the American public. Certainly the racers are anxious to have us. They have worked hard to get here.

Paterno Ends Poll With Nixon

NEW YORK (AP)—Joe Paterno, a self-described "little Italian boy from Brooklyn," pocketed a congratulatory telegram from Richard M. Nixon Wednesday and then put an end to his personal football poll with the President of the United States.

"I don't know who the No. 1 football team is," Paterno said as he accepted arecord-tying third consecutive Lambert Trophy for his unbeaten Penn State squad as the best team in the East.

"I never said we were No. 1. I merely said we have as much right to be voted No. 1 as any other team."

Penn State, which completed its second straight 10-0 regular season and faces Missouri in the Orange Bowl, is ranked second nationally in The Associated Press poll. Texas, also 10-0 and bound for the Cotton Bowl against Notre Dame, remained No. 1 following Saturday's 15-14 victory over Arkansas, which was second at the time.

President Nixon presented Texas with a plaque as the top team in the country and raised a storm of protest from Gov. Raymond Shafer and his fellow Pennsylvanians. The President then ran to daylight and offered to give Penn State a plaque for the longest current winning streak—21 games.

"I don't want to accept any plaque until after the bowl games," Paterno said. "We might not have the longest winning streak any more. If we lose and Texas wins, they'll have the longest.

"Let's wait until all the evidence is in before picking a No. 1 team. After all, seven of the top 10 teams are in bowl games. We're still playing the season."

But Paterno couldn't resist one last needle at the President. In accepting the Lambert Trophy, he said:

"I couldn't feel better about receiving this trophy if it were presented on television by the President of the United States."

Nixon's telegram said that "when football historians look back to the 1960s, the Penn State team will rank at the top of this exciting decade."

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

A newly arrived visitor asked a beminked lady in the lobby of Las Vegas' Caesar's Palace, "Which way is it to the airline ticket office?" Without losing her rhythm (she couldn't lose her quarters fast enough at one machine, so was crouched over two), the lady answered, "Twenty slot machines straight ahead, then fourteen dice tables to the left."

After a farmer had bought sixty-eight axe handles — at the rate of two a week—at two dollars apiece, the hardware salesman couldn't resist asking him what on earth he was doing with them. The farmer explained he was selling them to his neighbor for a dollar each. "But that's ridiculous," expostulated the salesman. "Don't you realize you're losing a dollar on each sale?" "Sure I do," was the answer, "but it beats farming!"

A. In a mirage.

Q. Why is a speech delivered on the flight deck of a carrier like a damsel's costume jewelry?

A. Because it is a deck-oration.

Q. Why isn't ten cents worth what it once was?

A. Because dimes have changed.

Your Birthday

By STELLA

TODAY — Born today, you are a highly creative person who would rather be failing in his own cause than succeeding in someone else's. As a child you probably caused considerable disappointment to those who did not know how to value your individuality, for you often chose not to join others in ventures bound to bring recognition, desiring instead to set out in a direction of your own toward a goal only you could see. Maturity has enabled you to make some compromises — but not many.

When it comes to selecting a mate, it is important that you choose someone who has not got his or her heart set on the more common forms of success. You need someone who will support you wholeheartedly, someone who will trust you to do what you're doing even if he or she has no idea of it all. If your marriage partner has not these qualities, you may find yourself having to battle for goals you do not want.

You will have to guard against superficial spending, for you have a tendency to ignore the budget when faced with the luxuries of life. Good food, fine clothing, jewelry — these are more important to you than they perhaps ought to be. Paradoxically, your yearning for such things will probably decrease as your ability to purchase them increases.

To find what is in store for you today, select your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

TODAY

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 — Dec. 22) — New activity erupts explosively where you at least expect it. Those dependent upon you may be in for a shock.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23 - Jan. 20) — You can widen your horizons by taking your personal life in hand. Take more time to discover your own limits and potentialities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21- Feb. 19) — Younger family members have futures which may well depend upon the decisions you make this morning. Don't rush anything.

PISCES (Feb. 20 - March 21) — Preserve your physical vitality if you would have the strength and energy you need to meet the needs of late afternoon.

ARIES (March 22 - April 20) — Make no decisions involving others until you are absolutely certain that the ground you stand on is solid.

TAURUS (April 21 - May 21) — Go out of your way if necessary to keep from antagonizing others. This is a day when you could spoil things for yourself and others.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21) — The quieter your morning, the more able you will be to meet the afternoon successfully. Full speed ahead by evening.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23) — A conflict of interests may cause you deep concern this morning. Choose to act on that matter which most clearly involves young people.

LEO (July 24 - Aug. 23) — Business plans may conflict with social activities this afternoon. The former must come first, however, if the latter is to be worth while.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 - Sept. 23) — Time now to repay debts long owed. Turn your attention to those activities which will let others know you care.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 - Oct. 23) — An opportunity to make a friend from a foe doesn't come often. Take advantage of just that sort of moment this morning.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22) — Make an effort to slow your pace down to a walk. Too long you may have been running simply in order to stand right where you are.

Arab, Israeli Guns Blaze on 2 Fronts

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arab and Israeli artillery blazed along two fronts Wednesday and shell fire hit a United Nations observation post on the cease-fire line.

Syria claimed shells from Israel destroyed the U.N. post.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said a trailer in which the observers live and a shelter were struck in the Golan Heights area of Syria but that no casualties were suffered.

An Israeli spokesman said he had no knowledge of the hit.

Artillery fire also broke out along the Israeli-Jordanian front, and Israel's jets again attacked Egyptian military targets on the western bank of the Suez Canal.

3 HOUR DUEL

Military sources in Damascus said the artillery duel raged for three hours and was the largest incident between Syria and Israel since the June 1967 war.

A Syrian military spokesman said Syria's guns opened fire when Israeli troops were seen "resuming building fortifications" in the occupied zone.

He claimed 26 Israelis were killed or wounded and three Syrians were killed. He said two Israeli tanks, three half-track military vehicles, a bulldozer and two machine-gun posts were destroyed against the loss of one antitank gun.

An Israeli spokesman said the Syrians opened fire on two tractors working on a road near the cease-fire line at Rafid, 25 miles east of the Sea of Galilee. The two tractors were undamaged.

He said that there were no Israeli casualties, but a number of Syrian targets were hit. Other sources said an ambulance was seen racing to the area to evacuate Syrian casualties.

The latest outbursts on the Syrian front, relatively quiet since the 1967 war, began three days ago, when Israel reported Syrian artillery fired on tractors in the same area.

FEARED PUSH

The sources said Syria apparently feared the Israelis were pushing their road through the narrow strip of no man's land sepaating the two armies.

The sources said the Israelis carried out a survey of the road Tuesday in the presence of U.N. observers. The road was found to remain inside Israeli-held territory, they said.

A Jordanian military spokesman in Amman claimed nine Israeli soldiers were killed when Jordanian artillery fire blasted an ammunition dump in the southern Jordan Valley.

The spokesman said the Israelis began the action when they opened fire on Jordanian forces near Karami, about five miles north of the Dead Sea. Fire was returned and an intermittent artillery and tank gun duel lasted for nearly three hours, he said.

The spokesman said there were no Jordanian losses. He added that "observed Israeli losses were two military vehicles destroyed, and an explosion in an ammunition dump which resulted in the death of nine of its members".

Israel said Arab guerrillas opened fire with bazookas and mortars, killing one Israeli soldier and wounding another. A spokesman reported the Arab action touched off an artillery duel between Israeli and Jordanian gunners.

Before dawn, guerrillas farther north sent rockets toward an Israeli settlement in the Beisan Valley but caused no damage, the Israelis said. Israeli guns replied with artillery fire.

Israeli gave no details on the air raid along the Suez Canal except to say the targets were near the southern end. This is an area repeatedly pounded by Israeli planes. A spokesman reported all planes returned safely.

The National Violence Commission reported that the U.S. is the most violent of stable nations. If a nation is not stable, that's a horse of another color.
